GOV. ROOSEVELT GIVES VIEWS ON 'BIG BUSINESS'

Speaks Before Club in San Francisco.

Challenges Hoover

San Francisco, Cal., Sept. 23.—[Special.]—Gov. Roosevelt in an address tonight challenged President Hoover "to come out of his silence and discuss live issues."

"You can not have an active debate with only one speaker," he said.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

San Francisco, Cal., Sept. 23.—[Special.]—Franklin D. Roosevelt's attitude toward "big business" was today brought to the full light of day.

Addressing members of the Commonwealth club, whose roster includes the upper crust of San Francisco's commercial life, Gov. Roosevelt uncovered his social mind, and showed his conviction that business leaders coming under his description as "titans," "princes of property," and "economic barons" must inevitably come under the restraint of government.

"We are living through the development of a new constitutional order in industry," was the theme of the "nonpolitical" talk delivered by the Democratic candidate for the presidency, and he said that slowly but surely the end of powerful economic combines and financial giants is approaching.

In Role of Professor.

It was not intended by Gov. Roosevelt that his speech should be taken as an exposition of intention on his part to attempt to enforce the doctrines he was discussing. He might have been a professor, addressing a class on economics, in so far as the tenor of his analysis went.

But it opened up for business men an opportunity to study the social philosophy of this leader of Democracy who has often been labeled a "radical" and as "unsafe" for business.

Mr. Roosevelt went far back to the days when governments were first set up for the maintenance of order in life, and he showed how the feudal barons oppressed the citizens and how the citizens' resistance brought them parliamentary government and protection. This evolution in government is being repeated in industry, the governor said.

Beginning of New Order.

At first industry grew apace, forging into unexplored fields for the benefit of the people, but then it grew autocratic and oppressive, as government had grown, and now, in the governor's view, has come the beginning of this new order in industry.

Gov. Roosevelt thought that in the gradual evolution of a new economic order business men of America of high caliber would lead the way without much need for laws or restraint by the government. Frequently the governor affirmed his faith in the business leadership of the nation. But he was unrestrained in his condemnation of the unscrupulous financiers who refuse to recognize the rights and privileges of all peoples and classes.

Urges Working Together.

"The responsible heads of finance and industry, instead of acting each for himself," said the governor, "must work together to achieve the common end. They must, where necessary, sacrifice this or that private advantage, and in reciprocal self-denial must see a general advantage.

"It is here that formal government —political government, if you choose—comes in. Whenever in the pursuit of this objective the lone wolf, the unethical competitor, the reckless promoter, the Ishmael or Insull whose hand is against every man's, declines to join in achieving an end recognized as being for the public welfare and threatens to drag the industry back to a state of anarchy, the government may properly be asked to apply restraint. Likewise should the group ever use its collective power contrary to the public welfare the government must be swift to enter and protect the public interest.

Only as Last Resort.

"The government should assume the function of economic regulation only as a last resort, to be tried only when private initiative, inspired by high responsibility, with such assistance and balance as government can give, has finally failed. As yet there has been no final failure, because there has been no attempt, and I de-

G.O.P. LAUNCHES DRIVE HERE TO WIN MIDWEST

Hoover Speaks Oct. 4 in Des Moines.

BY ARTHUR EVANS.

A drive for the winning of Iowa, Wisconsin and the agricultural midwest was launched yesterday by the Republicans. President Hoover is to speak in his native state of Iowa Oct. 4, at Des Moines, and H. E. Spangler, national committeeman, passing through Chicago, dropped word at national headquarters at the Palmer house that preparations are being made to make it "the biggest Republican day in the history of Iowa."

Mr. Spangler, who was en route to Washington to be the week-end guest of the President at the Rapidan camp, said the President's opening campaign speech is to be given at the state fairgrounds at Des Moines.

Iowa to Be Battle Ground.

President Hoover will appear five days after the speech Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt, his Democratic opponent, is to deliver at Sioux City Sept. 29, and the two opposing addresses will mark the opening of the real struggle for rock ribbed Republican Iowa and the rest of the agricultural belt.

The situation in Iowa is improving for the Republicans, according to state leaders at headquarters yesterday, but they hold the state requires much work. One possible complication is the report that Senator Smith Wildman Brookhart may announce himself as an independent candidate for senator at a meeting of farmers next Monday at Washington, Ia.

The meeting was called by Frank J. Lund of Webster City, who managed the Brookhart campaign in 1926, and its purpose is to put a third ticket in the field. Brookhart, a senate radical and one of the "sons of the wild jackass," was defeated in the Republican primaries by Henry Field, the Shenandoah nurseryman and radio order merchant.

Roosevelt Here Oct. 1.

Gov. Roosevelt is to speak at a banquet in Chicago Oct. 1, according to an announcement yesterday from Democratic headquarters. The demand for tickets led Democrats yesterday to hunt a large dining hall. The Roosevelt speech is to be broadcast and also projected into Grant park by amplifiers.

Later in the campaign, probably Oct. 23, the New York governor is expected to speak in the Chicago Stadium where he was nominated and where he made his acceptance speech after flying from Albany, N. Y. On that occasion he will be on the program with Judge Henry Horner, Democratic nominee for governor, and during the trip he may appear also at Springfield, or some other downstate city.

Reply to Topeka Speech.

In counter argument to Gov. Roosevelt's Topeka speech on the agricultural situation, Republican headquarters yesterday issued a new sheaf of "build up" material for the information of platform speakers, saying "The Topeka speech offers splendid opportunities for showing up the Democratic candidate in his meandering efforts to farm the farmer."

The text matter goes back to the Wilson administration. "The American farmer," it says, "is entitled to know that he was deflated by the Democrats. He has constantly been exploited by the Democrats. They robbed him of his tariff in 1913. They have sought continuously to place the American farmer in direct competition with the cheap lands and low priced agricultural products of other nations by making the American market an international dumping ground.

"Candidate Roosevelt continues to demand a downward revision of the tariff and when any Democrat makes such a demand it is generally known that the downward revision means, in the end, no tariff.

Urge Still Higher Tariff.

"The present agricultural tariff rates, established under the Hawley-Smoot bill, are the highest agriculture has ever had. It is becoming evident that these rates are not high enough, for the reason that they do not preserve our market to the American farmer.

"During the first eleven months of 1931 our imports of agricultural imports exceeded our exports by 68 million dollars. If these imports were grown in the United States instead of some foreign country, it would mean that 10 million acres more of our land would be producing crops which could be consumed in the United States.

YOUTH'S SLAYER AT SCHOOL DANCE FREED BY JURY

After less than an hour's deliberations a jury in Judge Rudolph Desort's Criminal court last night found Alex Roney, 51 years old, not guilty of the murder of Louis Lakin, 17 years old, a Tuley High school graduate.

The boy was shot and killed on the night of Jan. 17 when he and several companions tried without invitation to enter a dance at the Dr. Herzl community house on the northwest side. Roney, watchman at the place, fired at the boys in driving them away.

Relatives of the slain youth and many of his high school friends created some commotion in court when the verdict was read. Mrs. Anna Lakin, mother of the boy, screamed and collapsed from her chair. Friends of Roney, and his attorneys, Samuel Hoffman and Charles Daugherty, congratulated him. They had claimed self-defense for him.

She Has a "Bridge Date," So Judge Postpones Case

Baltimore, Md., Sept. 23.—(AP)—Judge Albert S. J. Mrs. Brick, the plaintiff in the case at yesterday's hearing, told the judge she had won at the bridge game. She also won her appeal before Judge Owens.

New Oak Park Gandhi Fasts Unexpectedly

Posted on the locked front door of the drug store at 331 South boulevard, Oak Park, until recently operated by John P. Lee, is a legal notice. Peering out last night with his melancholy countenance close to the document, and wishing in a heartfelt way for a big meal, was Anthony Carderine, 508 Harvey avenue, the Gandhi of Oak Park.

Carderine was, and doubtless still is this morning, a willing prisoner. He dared a constable to lock him in the store Thursday morning and the constable accommodated him. The only way for him to get out is to break out, and his conscience won't let him do that.

Accepts Foodless Task.

But the matter of going hungry is distressing to him. Carderine is a large person who enjoys his victuals, and long before the 38th hour of his confinement he had devoured everything edible in the drug store. The stock, it may be mentioned, was low when the key was turned on him.

"The crackers went last," he shouted through the door. "Now I'm starving. Get somebody to send me some grub. What do they expect me to do live on water and a pinch of soda like Gandhi?"

A legal drama, with two claimants fighting for the right to auction off the physical assets of the drug store, caused Mr. Carderine to be locked in.

He is a representative of the John T. Cunningham Ice Cream company, whose officials assert they have a chattel mortgage on the fixtures. His orders were to go to the store and stay there to make sure nobody moved out anything of value.

Locked Up with Stock.

But Charles B. Ford, owner of the building, several days before obtained a judgment against John P. Lee for rent. When he heard of the presence of the ice cream company representative he summoned Constable E. T. Marquardt, who posted the order of sale approved by Magistrate Mix of River Forest and ordered Mr. Carderine out. He refused to go.

"All right," said Constable Marquardt, "stay there. We'll auction you off, too, on Oct. 3."

Carderine said last night that he was going to carry on his hungry job for quite a while longer unless he gets orders to leave. The constable said he would, as a special concession, open the door if his employers or anybody else sent him a tray of food. That wasn't helping the prisoner any, as no trays appeared.

First Man to Send Byrd Message at Pole Killed

Yonkers, N. Y., Sept. 23.—(AP)—Harold W. Fowlkes, 24 year old Negro amateur wireless operator, who was the first man to establish contact with Admiral Richard E. Byrd's party in Little America, was electrocuted last night as he was repairing his radio apparatus.

DAYLIGHT SAVING TIME OFF TONIGHT; SET YOUR CLOCKS

Chicagoans who want an extra hour of sleep tomorrow morning must not forget to set their alarm clocks back an hour tonight. Officially, daylight saving time ends at 2 a. m. tomorrow, the city and most of the suburbs returning to central standard time then.

Some slight changes will be made in railroad schedules to conform to the fall and winter system of time keeping. Those which have been operating with daylight saving clocks will leave their schedules as they are. Suburban trains on the North Western railroad, which have been running on central time, will even up by pushing schedules back an hour. As an instance a train that has been leaving at 4:17 p. m. central time will leave at 5:17 central time.

DREDGE COMPANY HEAD ENDS LIFE IN LAKE FOREST

Edward M. Graves, president of the Central Dredging company, shot and killed himself early last evening in the library of his home at 230 South Sheridan road, Lake Forest. He was 55 years old.

Graves had just finished dinner with his wife, a nephew and Thomas Dolan, a business associate. He went alone into the library and fired a single shot which passed through his head. He was dead when the others rushed in.

Dolan said that Graves had appeared rational while dining, but had spoken in a melancholy strain about growing old. Graves, he added, had just returned from the east and that he had visited offices of his company in Baltimore and in Philadelphia. He professed to know of no reason for suicide.

Graves was a native of Indianapolis, but had resided in the Chicago area for about seven years. He was a graduate of Purdue university and a lieutenant in the engineering reserve corps. In 1929 he publicly charged that the Lincoln park board had refused to let his company bid on work here. He is survived by his widow.

Move to Oust Teachers in School Cafes

A charge that there is a plot on foot to wrest the school lunch rooms from the domestic science teachers and place them in charge of private individuals was made last night by Mrs. Thomas B. Stephenson, chairman of district 1 of the parent-teacher organizations. The district embraces 87 schools on the south side.

Acording to Mrs. Stephenson, the individuals interested want to take over the management of all the lunch rooms, of which the annual gross receipts amount to $1,500,000. Parent-teacher executives from all parts of the city will appear at the school board meeting Monday afternoon to protest.

Seeks to Oust Teachers.

At the last meeting of the school board a communication from Mary Dempsey, president of the school attendants' union, was read. Miss Dempsey asked that she be given a hearing on a plan for "improvement that could be made in the operation and management of many school lunch rooms and cafeterias."

"Those teachers shouldn't be in charge there," she said later. "I believe that our own people should manage the lunch rooms."

Mrs. Ray Gibson, one of Mrs. Stephenson's assistants in parent-teacher activities, said that if the lunch rooms passed out of the hands of teachers she feared the prices of lunches would be raised and the school children would suffer. She said the lunch rooms would be operated for private profit.

Mothers Cook the Food.

Besides Mrs. Stephenson and Mrs. Gibson, the parent-teacher executives who will go before the school board Monday are Mrs. Holland Flagler, state president of the organization, and Mrs. Charles W. Balch, state chairman.

In many "penny lunch rooms" in the poorer districts of the city the mothers cook the food and serve it. All the funds go toward the purchase of food only. Among the funds for this project is the Hungry School Children's fund, sponsored by THE TRIBUNE.

The domestic science teachers handle the purchase of food and balancing of the meals in the lunch rooms. In the senior and junior high school lunch rooms the lunches average 18 cents each.

C. of C. Opposes Change.

Further opposition to any plan to change the management of the lunch rooms was expressed last night by Otto F. Profant, president of the Chicago West Town Chamber of Commerce. "There has never been any kick about the meals served there," he declared, "and we feel that the operation of the lunch rooms by any others than the teachers now in charge would mean a hardship for teachers and parents."

The operation of the lunch rooms by the school board is under attack in a suit pending before Judge William J. Lindsey of the Superior court. The Associated Retailers of Chicago, charging that small store owners in the vicinity of schools are being ruined by the lunch room competition, are seeking to enjoin the school board from this activity.

M'GOORTY GETS THREAT NOTES AND POLICE ACT

Following several threatening letters to Judge John P. McGoorty, whose home was bombed on Tuesday night, resulting in the maiming of a youth and a girl, an armed police guard was established at his home last night and a detective detail was assigned to escort him to and from his court and home.

This was the latest development in the fight of the authorities against bombers. Another development was the identification of one William McDaniels by a former West Pointer and army captain as one of three men whom he had seen in an automobile near the judge's home a few minutes before the bombing.

Notes Threaten Judge.

Placing of the police guards at Judge McGoorty's home and assignment of detectives to escort him were ordered by Acting Chief of Detectives Walter Storms. It was to Storms that Judge McGoorty turned over the threatening notes. One of the letters warned: "What the bomb failed to do a shotgun will do."

The guards went on duty at the Judge's home last evening. They will work in three hour shifts of two men each. One man will guard the front and one the rear of the home, prepared to shoot any suspicious prowlers. The personal guard will begin work at 8:45 o'clock this morning. At that hour a squad will meet Judge McGoorty at his home and escort him to the county building. When court adjourns another squad will take him home.

Judge McGoorty said last night that he did not request the protection, but was unwilling to refuse the offer of it in view of the circumstances.

Points Out Prisoner.

The witness who pointed out the prisoner, McDaniels, is Louis A. Merillat Jr., whose home at 1113 East 45th street is only two blocks from the McGoorty residence at 929 East 45th street. Merillat, who is engaged in foreign trade, was graduated at West Point in 1915. He was a member of the military academy football team and won an All-American rating from the late Walter Camp. His 15 year old daughter, Mary Lou, also figured in identifying McDaniels.

After the identification Merillat and his daughter were taken home in a squad car and a police guard from the Hyde Park station was placed at their home.

Merillat's identification was regarded as of potential importance by Assistant State's Attorney Harry S. Ditchburne, Acting Chief Storms, Supervising Captain John Prendergast, and Lieut. John Treacy of the bomb detail. Merillat said that McDaniels was near Judge McGoorty's home on the night of the bombing and on two previous nights, as well.

Sees Three Men in Car.

"I first saw McDaniels Sunday night," said Merillat. "My daughter and I were returning home from a baseball game when we found the drive at our home occupied by a large car. In it were three men, one hatless and in his shirt sleeves. They were discourteous when I tried to park my car. I looked hard at this man, McDaniels, and he returned the look."

Mary Lou also recalled having seen McDaniels in the car on Sunday night. The automobile was garish with chromium plating, a circumstance which impressed the incident on Merillat's mind. This decoration, he said, was heaviest on a rear trunk. The trio, he said, remained in front of his home for about an hour.

He noticed the same car and three men in it on Monday night, he said. Again they parked about an hour. Once he saw the automobile moving slowly. By this time the automobile attracted more than casual interest on his part, he asserted.

Bomb Blast After Car Passes.

"On Tuesday night," continued Merillat, "I was putting my daughter to bed and opening the window I saw this same car coming slowly down the street. It was moving not more than five miles an hour. It was going west. About two or three minutes later I heard an explosion. At the time I did not know what had occurred, but my daughter, running to the window, told me that men were running down the street. I learned what had actually occurred the next morning."

Merillat's story and that of his daughter were told at the Chicago Lawn station, where McDaniels is being held. Merillat picked out McDaniels from a group of three or four men. "I am positive this is the man I saw in the car," he said unhesitatingly.

McDaniels, who is 59 years old and lives at 5923 South May street, was arrested Thursday when police learned that he had tried to dispose of thirteen and one-half sticks of dynamite the morning after the bombing. He is a former West Virginia miner. He denied any knowledge of the McGoorty bombing.

He explained his possession of the dynamite by saying that he had purchased it for 10 cents a stick at Diamond, W. Va., while visiting there early this month. He bought twenty sticks, but sold six and one-half pieces, he asserted. He did not account for the missing half stick. He declared he became panicky over possession of the explosive when he learned of the bombing and tried to hide it.

McDaniels admitted that he also had disposed of some dynamite caps and fuse, but these could not be found at the spot where he said he had thrown them away. McDaniels is said to have operated a beer flat at various times. He submitted to an extensive questioning last night by Assistant State's Attorney Ditchburne, Acting Chief Storms, and Capt. Prendergast. After a short rest they resumed the questioning shortly before midnight.

Raid a Political Club.

Early in the day another police squad raided a 27th ward political club at 24 South Halsted street in search of James Belcastro, so-called "king of the bombers" and a public enemy, and "Dago" Lawrence Mangano. Neither was there, but nine men were seized. Only one man was held last night, the others being released.

Meanwhile surgeons at the Chicago hospital were awaiting further medical treatment of Lee Wilbur Koeppen, 16 years old, who received the full blast of the bomb explosion in front of the McGoorty home and who is blinded for life. His companion injured in the blast was Mrs. Ada Miller Moyer, a 16 year old mother, who, it was feared for a time, had also been blinded. She will recover from her injuries and doctors hope that the youth will also recover. He will be crippled as well as be blind, however. Attending Lee are Drs. L. P. Piper, C. C. Clement, S. J. Conway, and Victor Frankenstein.

AUTO BUYER IS CHARGED WITH DUPING SELLERS

The grand jury yesterday was reported to have voted true bills charging confidence game against Michael Gambell, alias James Hall, alias Michael Gardner, who formerly operated second hand automobile salesrooms throughout the city. His last known place of business was under the name of the Hall Motor Sales, 3245 West North avenue. The grand jury fixed Gambell's bond at $10,000.

Gambell is charged with fleecing his victims by advertising in THE TRIBUNE that he would buy second hand automobiles for cash. When an automobile was taken to his salesroom, it is charged, he would make a small cash payment and promise to pay the balance soon, giving notes due within 90 days. By the time the notes fell due Gambell would have moved.

According to Attorney Joseph Tausig of the firm of Kirkland, Fleming, Green & Martin, representing THE TRIBUNE, Gambell operated in Des Moines, Ia., and Fort Wayne and Indianapolis, Ind. Sergt. Carl Lemke of the automobile detail, who assisted Attorney Tausig in gathering the evidence, requested that other victims of Gambell communicate with him.

SENATE TO BEGIN INVESTIGATION OF INSULL DEBACLE

Norbeck Says Inquiry Will Open in December.

An investigation of the crash of the Insull utilities enterprises will be undertaken by the United States senate as soon as congress convenes next December, Senator Peter Norbeck, chairman of the senate banking committee, declared yesterday, according to a dispatch from his home at Redfield, S. D.

SENATOR NORBECK.

The investigation will be an offshoot of the stock market quiz conducted by the banking committee last spring the Associated Press quoted Senator Norbeck as saying.

"Investigations carried on this summer have confirmed my suspicion that much of the Insull stock was sold on misrepresentation and fake reports as to ownership," the senator declared.

Swanson Seeks Funds.

Meanwhile State's Attorney John A. Swanson took steps to push the investigation he is making of the affairs of the Insull companies. Appearing before the county board, the state's attorney requested a $50,000 appropriation, which, he said, is needed if his office is to make a detailed probe of the two bankrupt investment trusts and other Insull enterprises. The county commissioners indicated they would formally grant his request at a meeting of the board next week.

"You cut my contingent fund $50,000 this year, so I'm only asking for the same amount I got last year with which to do much more work," the state's attorney told the commissioners.

Bank Inquiry Uses Funds.

The prosecutor said he had exhausted his funds in the investigation of the Bain banks and other matters and that he had actually spent more thus far than his appropriation.

"I must have definite assurance that I can proceed unhampered by lack of funds in an investigation of the Insull collapse."

"What was the audit cost in the investigation of the bank failures?" asked Commissioner Peter M. Kelly.

"Between $150,000 and $200,000 for ten or twelve auditors who worked for seven or eight months on twelve banks," said the prosecutor. "In addition, there were five or six attorneys employed, with one special man in charge of the whole thing in order to present the proper legal evidence to the court."

O'Connor Protests.

At this point Assistant Controller Michael J. O'Connor protested against the spending of more money.

"We are earning from $3,000,000 to $4,000,000 less this year in fees than anticipated," said Mr. O'Connor "We've got to stop spending. We are incurring expenses we will never be able to pay."

"If I don't get more money I'll have to drop civil investigations and prosecutions and confine myself wholly to criminal prosecutions," replied the state's attorney.

"I move that the county board assure the state's attorney that we will coöperate with him and encourage him," said Commissioner William Busse.

"In other words, we wish him well," said other commissioners.

Attorneys and Financiers Study Next Step in Affairs of Bankrupt Corp. Securities

The next step in the affairs of the bankrupt Corporation Securities company, $140,000,000 Insull investment trust, occupied the attention of financiers, attorneys, and investors yesterday. The report filed by the receivers and the memorandum written by Federal Judge Walter C. Lindley on Thursday when he adjudged the corporation bankrupt were being studied by experts and also by investors who have been given virtually no hope of realizing anything on their securities.

As an indication of what the bankruptcy action may bring, particularly in the way of litigation to recover assets of the corporation from its directors and others, the judge's memorandum was declared to be illuminating.

Proper Administration.

The text of the memorandum is as follows:

"Shortly after the equity proceedings involving the corporation were instituted, and receivers in equity were appointed, I became of the opinion that the proper form for the administration of the estate was the Bankruptcy court, rather than a court of equity.

"The information which since that time has come to me from the receivers and their counsel, and from the reports and audits which have been prepared, has confirmed that opinion until it has become a firmly fixed conviction.

Equity Administration Fades.

"Receivership in equity may be an admirable process for the administration of an estate where there is probability of a reorganization with a resulting benefit to the creditors and stockholders, but when it becomes apparent that reorganization with substantial assets sufficient in character and amount to warrant the continuation of an active company is not possible, the desirability of equity administration fades away.

"The bankruptcy law enacted by congress has created the Bankruptcy court for the speedy and efficient administration of insolvent concerns. The act authorizes the most thorough and searching examination into the affairs of the company.

"It affords every possible means known to lawyers for the realization of assets. Suits may be instituted to recover preferences, to set aside transfers, and to determine priority of liens.

"Examinations may be conducted whereby all information bearing upon any or all of such proposed actions and discovery of assets may be had before the court. Receivers in equity have no jurisdiction beyond the confines of their own district. A trustee in bankruptcy has jurisdiction in all parts of the United States.

Demands of Situation.

"In the present situation, therefore, it becomes apparent that the receivership in equity is inadequate to meet the demands of the situation; that there is no chance of a reorganization; that there are no assets other than such, if any, as may be recovered by proper litigation instituted by the trustee.

"It appears, further, that the affairs of this corporation are of a complicated character, and a tremendous amount of investigation in equity may be avoided by properly conducted examination in bankruptcy. Apparently there is no possibility that assets of sufficient character and amount as to bring stockholders any return whatever will ever be realized. Apparently the most that can be hoped for is a distribution of dividends amongst creditors, and such a result can best be achieved through administration in bankruptcy."

Two items in the report of the receivers in equity, Raymond J. McNally and Patrick J. Lucey, were regarded as of special significance. The first dealt with the manner in which Corporation Securities was organized and the second with the condition of the corporation at the time certain bank loans were reduced.

Merger of Two Concerns.

Relating the history of the corporation, the receivers point out that it represented a merger between the Old Corporation Securities company, a dormant concern with no assets which was wholly owned by Halsey-Stuart & Co., and the Western Securities Co., an inactive concern wholly controlled by the Insull family with 152,000 shares of the common stock of Insull Utility Investments as its only assets.

To acquire assets before entering the merger the receivers assert, Old Corporation Securities obtained a $3,500,000 loan from the Continental-Illinois Bank and Trust company, with which it purchased 152,000 shares of Insull Utility Investments, matching the amount held by Western Securities company. The shares were acquired from Halsey-Stuart.

An Amazing Deal.

"This is one of the amazing features of the deal," said one of the lawyers working under the receivers. "The transfer of the stock simply meant that Halsey-Stuart was transferring assets from one pocket to another pocket.

"The second remarkable feature was the price paid for the stock. Records of the Chicago Stock exchange show that on Oct. 5, the day new Corporation Securities was organized, the shares of Insull Utility Investments for which the old corporation paid $3,500,000 had a market value of $30,000,000.

"As an instance of corporation practice, the deal is utterly incomprehensible. We should like to secure an explanation from Halsey-Stuart."

Harry L. Stuart, head of Halsey-Stuart, was in New York yesterday. Frank K. Shrader, vice president of Halsey-Stuart and director of Corporation Securities, was at home with a cold. C. F. Clark, another vice president, although unfamiliar with the organization of Corporation Securities, said he would try to explain the $3,500,000 purchase.

Certificates on File.

"What they are evidently trying to insinuate," he said, "is that the stock was water. The certificates on file with the secretary of state at Springfield declare the stock was worth $30,000,000. The market price reflected the valuation placed on the stock in the certificates at Springfield. That would seem to eliminate any suspicion that the stock was water."

Mr. Clark professed to see no significance in the method whereby old Corporation Securities acquired the 152,000 shares.

"Assume the corporation had acquired the stock for nothing," he said. "It would make no difference. As the attorneys for the receivers pointed out, it was, in effect, a transfer from one pocket to another."

With reference to bank loans, the receivers make the significant statement that, in their opinion, Corporation Securities was insolvent in December, 1931, four months before it went into receivership. They go on to point out that at this the corporation made payments in excess of $1,000,000 to reduce their loans to New York banks.

Open Hearings Wednesday.

The next step in the receivership of Corporation Securities and Insull Utility Investments will be taken next Wednesday when Judge Lindley opens the bankruptcy hearings here. The hearings are expected to consume at least six weeks, after which the creditors of both companies will probably meet to elect a trustee in bankruptcy.

The trustee will replace the receivers in bankruptcy—Mr. McNally for Corporation Securities, and Calvin Fentress for Insull Utility Investments. In transferring the case from equity to bankruptcy, Judge Lindley dispensed with two co-receivers in the equity proceedings. They were Patrick J. Lucey for Corporation Securities, and George A. Cooke for Insull Utility Investments.

Russell F. Locke, one of counsel for the receivers, objected to the statement made Thursday night at Mr. Lucey had been "dismissed."

"He was not dismissed," the attorney said. "With the transfer of the corporation from equity receivership to bankruptcy the court felt that the services of two receivers was unnecessary. Mr. Lucey gave valuable service in the equity proceedings."

SEA EXPLORER'S BATHYSPHERE IS LOANED TO FAIR

The bathysphere in which Dr. William Beebe set a new deep sea diving mark of 2,200 feet Thursday off Nonsuch island, Bermuda, will be an exhibit at the World's Fair next year. Exposition officials announced yesterday that arrangements had been made for the loan of the hollow metal ball.

Dr. Beebe's device will be placed in an exhibit called "The Sea as a Place to Live" in the Hall of Science.

The bathysphere is about six feet in diameter. It has three windows of fused quartz through which the explorer may view the submarine life about him. The ball will withstand a pressure of 4,800 tons. It is lowered from a boat by a cable. The sphere is connected with the world above by two light and two telephone wires, encased in heavy rubber insulation, while oxygen tanks and open pans of chemicals for the absorption of carbon dioxide keep the air fresh.

SANFORD F. COONS IS ARRAIGNED ON SHOOTING CHARGE

Wife Blames In-Laws for Their Troubles.

Sanford F. Coons, 60 years old, retired manufacturer, was arraigned yesterday before Municipal Judge John F. Haas on a charge of assault with a deadly weapon. Coons shot and wounded Humphrey W. Fall, a private detective, Thursday night when the sleuth attempted to bar Coons from the letter's home at 9313 Winchester avenue, Beverly Hills.

Coons was released on a $200 bond and the case was continued until Oct. 5, to allow Fall, who is in the Little Company of Mary hospital, to recover from his wounds and testify. Fall is in the employ of Louis Dannenberg, private detective, not W. C. Dannenberg, as previously reported.

Wife Obtains Injunction.

Mrs. Lillian Coons filed suit for separate maintenance Thursday against her husband, charging cruelty, and obtained a temporary injunction from Superior Judge Joseph Sabath restraining Coons from molesting her or disposing of any of his property pending disposition of the case. The private detective was hired for her by her attorney, Albert Sabath, to protect her from her husband, it was stated.

Mrs. Coons, in an interview yesterday, however, blamed her husband's brother-in-law, Albert G. Jones, for their marital discord.

"Although I have been married 18 years to Mr. Coons, I was his second wife and his family never was friendly to me," she declared. "Last Saturday night, Mr. Jones and his wife came to our house and prepared, uninvited, to stay for the night. An argument followed and Mr. Jones struck me in the face repeatedly."

Displays Bruises.

Mrs. Coons displayed a bruised jaw and eye. In her separate maintenance bill, she charged her husband with beating and then leaving her last Saturday night.

Coons has two married daughters by his first wife, Mrs. Coons said. They are Mrs. Leslie C. Harbison Jr., 180 East Delaware place, and Mrs. Miles L. Zoller of Cincinnati. Coons is wealthy, having received one-third of the $5,000,000 purchase price of the Melba Manufacturing company, of which he was president, when it was sold five years ago.

LINK SKELETONS AND PLANE'S BITS WITH LOST FLYERS

CURLING, N. F., Sept. 23.—(AP)—Possibility that traces of the lost French flyers, Nungesser and Coli, had been found on Blomidon, a mountain on the south side of the Bay of Islands and 20 miles from here, was considered today as reports persisted that two skeletons and the remains of an airplane had been found.

Although it was not possible immediately to confirm the report, it was recalled that on the day the French flyers were lost—May 9, 1927—a light similar to that caused by an explosion was reported seen in the vicinity of Blomidon by residents of Bay of Islands. No investigation was made at the time, however.

Capt. Charles Nungesser and Capt. Francois Coli, veteran pilots of the war, hopped off from Paris on May 8, 1927, to fly nonstop to New York. They were not seen again. It was generally believed that they crashed to death in Newfoundland.

TRACE $173,000 TO DAVIS FROM LODGE LOTTERY

Witnesses Bare Senator's Bank Accounts.

New York, Sept. 23.—[Special.]—A total of $173,837.28 of the proceeds from the Loyal Order of Moose charity balls of 1930 and 1931, which the prosecution charges were lotteries, was traced into bank accounts controlled by Senator James J. Davis of Pennsylvania as his trial continued in federal court today.

William B. Herlands and Louis Mead Treadwell, assistant United States attorneys, put in this evidence against the background, adduced earlier, of a contract between the propagation department of the order and Bernard McGuire, a professional promoter, in which it was stated that the arrangement had the approval of Mr. Davis.

Also included in that background was the testimony, admitted by Judge Frank J. Coleman, over objections of Charles H. Tuttle, defense counsel, that a package containing a book of tickets to the 1930 ball, addressed to Mr. Davis at the Pittsburgh Moose lodge, had been delivered and signed for by Fred W. Jones, who exercised a power of attorney over all of the bank accounts into which the $173,000 was traced.

Considered Blow at Defense.

The day was considered by Mr. Treadwell to have been the most important of the trial, particularly in reference to the indicated defense by Mr. Davis that although he participated in many of the affairs of the order he was not aware of the details of the charity balls and did not know they were in the nature of a lottery.

The prosecution scored a major victory when Judge Coleman ruled that Theodore G. Miller, who testified he "was" the propagation department of the order and on a previous appearance on the stand had refused to answer questions on the ground of self-incrimination since he was under indictment and faced a later trial in the same case, must produce the records of his department.

The records were brought in, three boxes of them; and after that Jacob Hoffler, a government accountant of the department of justice, took the stand to deliver his summaries of the entries in the propagation department books dealing with the receipt and disbursement of the funds brought in by the charity balls in 1930 and 1931.

Tells of Bank Account.

The propagation department, he said, maintained bank accounts on which checks drawn by the joint signature of Miller and McGuire were honored in the Aurora National bank of Aurora, Ill., the Chemical Bank and Trust company of New York, the Fidelity Trust company of Pittsburgh, the Guarantee Trust company of New York, and the First National bank of Batavia, Ill. In addition, he said, there was a "propagation department special" account on which checks drawn by Miller as "secretary and treasurer" were honored in the First National bank of Aurora, Ill.

Into these accounts Miller and McGuire placed $1,067,728.75 as the proceeds of the propagation department after the various lodges in which the fifty cent tickets were sold had taken $533,864.37 as their share of the total sale.

Out of these various accounts three checks for a total of $100,000 were drawn to the "organization department of the Loyal Order of Moose" and were deposited in the Fidelity Trust company with the indorsement of Fred W. Jones, treasurer.

Controlled by Davis.

This was one of the accounts controlled by Mr. Davis over which Jones exercised a power of attorney. Another check for $15,300 was banked in the personal account of Mr. Davis in the same bank, with the indorsement of Fred W. Jones, treasurer, since Jones also had power of attorney over that one. A fifth check for $17,850.29, payable to the Liberty Bond and Mortgage company, was banked to the credit of that company by Jones, as treasurer for the organization department, the check having first been sent to him.

The final check of the 1930 charity balls was one for $177 made payable to Fred W. Jones and accompanied by a voucher which explained that of the total $77 was for the expenses of Jones and $100 for the expenses of Mr. Davis.

Gets More Cash Than Orphanage.

Mr. Heffler's summary of the books continued to show that out of the proceeds Miller drew $15,895.72 in salary and expenses and $16,849.71 as profit, for a total of $32,745.43.

McGuire, the summary showed, got $25,000 more of the profits than did the orphanage at Mooseheart, Ill., which was given as the reason for the charity balls.

A series of five checks, for a total of $150,000, was given to the orphanage, while McGuire drew $175,000 in profits and $15,198.87 in salary and expenses.

In 1931 the proceeds were $1,217,175.24, and of that sum, due to the increase in expense and the rest, $100,000 went to Mooseheart. One check for $40,000 was made out to the organization department, and was banked in the Fidelity Trust company, with the indorsement of Jones, thus completing the $173,000 figure set by the government as the profit derived by Mr. Davis from the promotion.

In that year [1931] McGuire got $100,000 of the profits and $6,600 expenses and salary, while Miller got $60,000 of the profits and $19,737.24 as salary and expenses. Whereas in 1930 the total of prizes awarded to those who held tickets pulled out at the drawing was $50,000, in 1931 the total was jumped to $150,000.

On cross-examination Charles J. Margiotti, associated with Charles H. Tuttle as counsel for the defense, succeeded in making Mr. Heffler admit that Miller's stated share of the profits in 1930 was the exact remainder of $150,000 after the payments to Davis or the organization department were deducted and then he applied the same formula to 1931. The purpose, it was said, would be to show later that the money paid to the organization department was money which had been lent to Miller and the propagation department by Davis on previous occasions, and did not constitute a profit to the senator.

Terms of Contract.

The contract under which the charity balls were promoted by McGuire and Miller was read to the jurors after Mr. Miller from the witness stand had identified it as a copy of one made in 1931 and as containing substantially the same terms as the one used in 1930.

The 1931 contract engaged McGuire for a period of three years for the promotion of the affairs and allowed him a $200 weekly drawing account, with "one-third of the net profits of all activities of the propagation department." It acknowledged that $50,000 in bank accounts of the department was owned to the extent of one-third by McGuire.

Codicil six of the contract stipulated that "the party of the first part (Miller) asserts that he has the knowledge and consent of the supreme council and the director general, James J. Davis, of the Loyal Order of Moose of the World, in making this contract between the party of the first part and the party of the second part (McGuire) and that party of the first part has full power to do so."

The trial will be resumed on Monday.

NEW TRUE BILLS AGAINST BAINS IN BANK CRASH

Taking Deposits While Insolvent, Charge.

New true bills charging John Bain and three other officials of the West Englewood Trust and Savings bank with receiving deposits while the bank was insolvent were reported to have been voted yesterday by the grand jury. The others named are Bain's son, John H. Bain; his son-in-law, W. Merle Fisher, and Richard C. Barry, a vice president of the bank and a new figure in the case which grew out of the crash of the twelve Bain banks. Robert Bain, a younger son, was not named in the true bill.

JOHN BAIN.

The elder Bain was president of the bank, John H. Bain was assistant to the president, and Fisher was cashier. State Auditor Oscar Nelson was one of the witnesses before the grand jury in the second session yesterday, in which the evidence was presented by Special Assistant State's Attorney Edwin J. Raber and Assistant State's Attorneys Harold M. Keele and Henry Seyfarth. Prosecutor Raber said an early retrial would be sought after the indictments were returned.

The reported true bills came as a result of the state's dissatisfaction with the result of the earlier trial, in which Bain, his two sons, and Fisher were charged with conspiracy.

John Bain was sentenced to one to five years in the penitentiary by Judge John M. O'Connor, who heard the case without a jury. The other defendants were fined $1,000 each.

The reported voting of the true bills yesterday came simultaneously with the announcement that the Circuit court judges had accepted the resignation of Bain the elder as a south park commissioner. Meeting yesterday afternoon, the judges—eleven Republicans and nine Democrats—voted not to name a successor to Bain until Nov. 15, after the elections.

KENTUCKY MINISTER CHARGED WITH RAPE BY 17 YEAR OLD GIRL

Madisonville, Ky., Sept. 23.—(AP)—The Rev. Herbert Sheets, 29, pastor of a church at Boston, near here, was in jail here today without bond on a charge of rape preferred by Miss Julia Parker, 17, daughter of O. H. Parker of Madisonville. The minister denied the charge.

Miss Parker charged in a warrant issued this morning that the alleged attack occurred last night while she and Mr. Sheets were returning from Madisonville, where he had been holding a revival. She charged that after the alleged attack the minister drove her to the home of her cousin, R. C. Jackson, where both had been guests.

After the minister retired, she said, she told her relatives and authorities were notified.

SEND RECORDS TO FIGHT CAPONE FREEDOM MOVE

The records of the successful prosecution of Al Capone for income tax evasion were sent to Atlanta last night by United States Attorney Dwight H. Green, where they will be used to combat the gangster's attempt to win his freedom on a habeas corpus writ. Capone is serving a ten year penitentiary sentence, imposed by Federal Judge James H. Wilkerson after his conviction on a charge of willfully evading the payment of taxes for the years 1925 to 1927. Assistant United States Attorney Hal Lindsay, who requested the records, said the government expected the application for Capone's release to fail. Attorneys for the gang leader are seeking his release under a Supreme court ruling that the statute of limitations in income tax fraud cases for the period covered by the trial was three years.

Bandits Fail to Identify Alleged Police Helper

Three youths, charged with robbing the J. W. Johnson Awning company at 1237 Macedonia street of $1,445 yesterday, viewed all the policemen of the West Chicago avenue station in an effort to identify a patrolman who, they asserted, was on guard at the office and planned the stickup. According to Capt. Joseph Palczynski, in command of the station, the policeman on guard at the store passed the trio but was not recognized by them. The robbers under arrest are Edward Christenson, Frank Rzezkowski, and Walter Wing. Each is 17 years old.

U. S. CHAMBER OF COMMERCE RAPS BONUS PAYMENT

Also Asks Reduction in Veterans' Relief.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Sept. 23.—[Special.]—Unqualified opposition to immediate payment of the bonus and a demand for a reduction of at least 400 million dollars in federal veterans' benefits were expressed in a report submitted today to the board of the United States Chamber of Commerce by its committee on the reduction of government tax expenditures.

To pay the bonus would mean raising $2,200,000,000; would certainly require higher taxes, and might well result in national disaster, the report stated.

"The immediate payment of the unmatured debt represented by these certificates," the committee added, "will intensify the demand already being made for straight old time pension legislation, certain to be pressed more vigorously when the veterans experience decreased earning capacity due to old age. The very expectation of the payment of the certificates now and of a general pension allowance is conducive to improvidence in a segment of our people which preeminently should be expected to be self-reliant.

Discusses High Expenditures.

"The present provisions of the adjusted compensation act should be adhered to and all demands for payments prior to 1945 denied in the interest both of the veterans and the nation."

As a first step in cutting costs the committee recommended immediate repeal of laws granting allowances to veterans for disabilities not incurred in service. This, it was estimated, would save 100 million dollars in the current fiscal year and materially larger amounts in future years.

"If 10 per cent of the men who served in the world war draw disability allowance in 1932, fourteen years after the armistice and but eleven years after the official close of the war, when the average veteran age is still somewhat below forty," said the committee, "the future under such legislation can not be viewed with complacency.

Savings Estimated.

In addition to opposing payment of the bonus and payments for nonservice incurred disabilities the committee made still other recommendations. These were listed with estimated savings.

Charleston, W. Va., Sept. 23.—[Special.]—William J. Hall, 76, today carried out his threat to kill himself when he finished building a fence around his wife's grave. She died recently at their home near here. He completed the fence this morning, then shot himself with a rifle.

ADMIRAL SIMS QUITS LEGION; BONUS IS CAUSE

Says Veterans Desert Their Ideals.

Newport, R. I., Sept. 23.—[Special.]—Admiral William S. Sims announced this afternoon that he had resigned as honorary member of the American Legion as a protest against its bonus stand.

Admiral Sims, a member of the executive committee of the National Economy league, has been attacking gross expenditures in the veterans' bureau and yesterday in Boston spoke against "the nasty steal" of the Spanish-American war veterans on the pension.

In a letter to the national commander of the Legion, Admiral Sims states:

"When the national organization of the American Legion gave me the honor of making me one of its honorary members, I was assured that its governing body would maintain the patriotic ideals expressed in the preamble of the constitution and that it would continue to 'inculcate a sense of the individual obligation to the community, the state and national government.'

"As it now appears that the action on the bonus taken by the Legion at its recent national convention at a time of national distress is in direct repudiation of these ideals I feel that I can no longer retain my membership.

"It is with great regret that I am obliged to tender my resignation, for I had hoped this great organization would take advantage of its political power to promote the benefit of the nation."

Judge Frees Husband from Jail Alimony Row

Chris Ebbole was released from his cell in alimony row of the county jail yesterday by Superior Judge James J. Kelly when his attorney, Banjamin Vanderveld, showed that Ebbole had satisfied alimony arrears of $235 and had also served several weeks in jail for the claim of his wife, Mrs. Nina Ebbole, 1820 South Ridgeway avenue. Attorney Vanderveld was cited for contempt of court by Judge Joseph B. David for bringing a habeas corpus action for his client in Rockford, but the citation was withdrawn when Vanderveld was found to have acted in the interests of his client.

GOV. ROOSEVELT GIVES VIEWS ON "BIG BUSINESS"

He Speaks Before Club in San Francisco.

There was also in the governor's address a suggestion that in the long run of economic adjustment there must be a method adopted for "distributing wealth and products more equitably." Gov. Roosevelt included this statement in a general discussion of the trends which he thinks must develop by themselves. After asserting that small business men were being vanquished before the encroachment of the great corporations to the point where if it goes on "all American industry will be controlled by a dozen corporations and run by perhaps a hundred men," Gov. Roosevelt said it all calls for a "reappraisal of values."

"A mere builder of more industrial plants, a creator of more railroad systems, an organizer of more corporations, is as likely to be a danger as a help," the governor continued. "The day of the great promoter or the financial titan, to whom we granted anything if only he would build, or develop, is over.

"Our task now is not discovery or exploitation of natural resources, or necessarily producing more goods. It is the soberer, less dramatic business of administering resources and plants already in hand, of seeking to reestablish foreign markets for our surplus production, of meeting the problem of underconsumption, of adjusting production to consumption, of distributing wealth and products more equitably, of adapting existing economic organizations to the service of the people. The day of enlightened administration has come."

Economic Power "Public Trust."

Telling these San Francisco business men that in his capacity as governor of New York state he had laid down a policy that public officials must explain the sources of their wealth, and be held to a "stern and uncompromising rectitude," Mr. Roosevelt declared that "we are coming to a view through the drift of our legislation and our public thinking in the past quarter century that private economic power is, to enlarge an old phrase, a public trust as well.

"I hold that continued enjoyment of that power by any individual or group must depend upon the fulfillment of that trust," the governor added. "The men who have reached the summit of American business life know this best; happily, many of these urge the binding quality of this greater social contract."

Launching then into the view that government must protect the weak, Gov. Roosevelt said:

Owes Chance to Every Man.

"Every man has a right to life, and this means that he has also a right to make a comfortable living. He may by sloth or crime decline to exercise that right; but it may not be denied him. We have no actual famine or dearth; our industrial and agricultural mechanism can produce enough and to share. Our government, formal and informal, political and economic, owes to every man an avenue to possess himself of a portion of that plenty sufficient for his needs, through his own work.

"Every man has a right to his own property; which means a right to be assured, to the fullest extent attainable, in the safety of his savings. By no other means can men carry the burdens of these parts of life which, in the nature of things, afford no chance of labor, childhood, sickness, old age. In all thought of property this right is paramount; all other property rights must yield to it. If, in accord with this principle, we must restrict the operations of the speculator, the manipulator, even the financier, I believe we must accept the restriction as needful, not to hamper individualism but to protect it.

Must Assume Responsibility.

"These two requirements must be satisfied, in the main, by the individuals who claim and hold control of the great industrial and financial combinations which dominate so large a part of our industrial life. They have undertaken to be, not business men, but princes—princes of property. I am not prepared to say that the system which produces them is wrong. I am very clear that they must fearlessly and competently assume the responsibility which goes with the power."

Gov. Roosevelt answered criticisms that he was "putting the government in business."

"Some of my friends tell me that they do not want the government in business," he said. "With this I agree; but I wonder whether they realize the implications of the past. For, while it has been American doctrine that the government must not go into business in competition with private enterprises, still it has been traditional, particularly in Republican administrations, for business urgently to ask the government to put at private disposal all kinds of government assistance.

Cites Pleas for Tariff.

"The same man who tells you that he does not want to see the government interfere in business—and he means it, and has plenty of good reasons for saying so—is the first to go to Washington and ask the government for a prohibitory tariff on his product.

"When things get just bad enough—as they did two years ago—he will go with equal speed to the United States government and ask for a loan; and the Reconstruction Finance corporation is the outcome of it.

"Each group has sought protection from the government for its own special interests, without realizing that the function of the government must be to favor no small group at the expense of its duty to protect the rights of personal freedom and of private property of all its citizens.

Reaching "Last Frontier."

"In retrospect we can now see that the turn of the tide came with the turn of the century. We were reaching our last frontier; there was no more free land and our industrial combinations had become great uncontrolled and irresponsible units of power within the state.

"Clear sighted men saw with fear the danger that opportunity would no longer be equal; that the growing corporation, like the feudal baron of old, might threaten the economic freedom of individuals to earn a living."

"In that hour our anti-trust laws were born. The cry was raised against the great corporations. Theodore Roosevelt, the first great Republican progressive, fought a presidential campaign on the issue of 'trust busting' and talked freely about malefactors of great wealth.

Policy to Turn Clock Back.

"If the government had a policy it was rather to turn the clock back, to destroy the large combinations, and to return to the time when every man owned his individual small business.

"This was impossible. Theodore Roosevelt, abandoning the idea of 'trust busting,' was forced to work out a difference between 'good' trusts and 'bad' trusts. The Supreme court set forth the famous 'rule of reason' by which it seems to have meant that a concentration of industrial power was permissible if the method by which it got its power, and the use it made of that power, was reasonable."

Gov. Roosevelt said that President Wilson saw the situation more clearly than had President Roosevelt.

"Wilson knew that the new power was financial," the governor declared. "He saw in the highly centralized economic system the despot of the twentieth century, on whom great masses of individuals relied for their safety and their livelihood, and whose irresponsibility and greed [if it were not controlled] would reduce them to starvation and penury."

Reiterating then his stand that the time is nigh when the same change must be made in the industrial system as was made in the system of government, to relieve oppression, Gov. Roosevelt added that he would not abandon the basic principles upon which industry has been built. He said:

"We did not think because national government had become a threat in the 18th century that therefore we should abandon the principle of national government. Nor today should we abandon the principle of strong economic units called corporations, merely because their power is susceptible of easy abuse. In other times we dealt with the problems of an unduly ambitious central government by modifying it gradually into a constitutional democratic government. So today we are modifying and controlling our economic units.

"As I see it, the task of government in its relation to business is to assist the development of an economic declaration of rights, an economic constitutional order. This is the common task of statesman and business man. It is the minimum requirement of a more permanently safe order of things.

"Only Line of Safety."

"Happily, the times indicate that to create such an order not only is the proper policy of government, but it is the only line of safety for our economic structures as well. We know now that these economic units cannot exist unless prosperity is uniform—that is, unless purchasing power is well distributed throughout every group in the nation.

"That is why even the most selfish of corporations, for its own interest, would be glad to see wages restored and unemployment ended and to bring the western farmer back to his accustomed level of prosperity and to assure a permanent safety to both groups.

Cites "Enlightened Industries."

"That is why some enlightened industries themselves endeavor to limit the freedom of action of each man and business group within the industry in the common interest of all; why business men everywhere are asking a form of organization which will bring the scheme of things into balance, even though it may in some measure qualify the freedom of action of individual units within the business.

"The exposition need not further be elaborated. It is brief and incomplete, but you will be able to expand it in terms of your own business or occupation without difficulty. I think every one who has actually entered the economic struggle—which means every one who was not born to safe wealth—knows in his own experience and his own life that we have now to apply the earlier concepts of American government to the conditions of today."

Thousands Turned Away.

Fifteen thousand persons jammed the civic auditorium tonight and at least as many more were denied admittance to the night meeting at which Gov. Roosevelt made a political speech.

The governor was on familiar ground in this hall, for twelve years ago he was nominated for Vice President. At the very rostrum where the governor stood tonight Al Smith stood in 1920 and seconded Roosevelt's nomination.

Gov. Roosevelt recalled that event and he also recalled in a manner which brought the house down in a storm of cheers how he had made his maiden speech in a Democratic convention in seconding the nomination of Al Smith for President. Smith was first advanced for the presidential nomination here in 1920.

Praises Al Smith.

"It was my honor and my privilege," said the governor tonight, "to speak in impromptu fashion for five minutes in behalf of a great citizen and a great governor, Alfred E. Smith."

Prolonged cheers greeted this latest demonstration by Gov. Roosevelt of his affection for Al Smith.

Several times in the similar fashion the governor has invited Smith to emerge from his shell of silence to come out with an indorsement of the Roosevelt-Garner ticket.

Gov. Roosevelt's bid for the support of California's Republican Progressive leader, Senator Hiram Johnson, delivered at Sacramento yesterday, today drew a favorable comment from the senator, with an inference that he would lend much indirect support to Roosevelt.

MRS. ROOSEVELT ON WAY TO MEET HER HUSBAND IN WEST

Albany, N. Y., Sept. 23.—[Special.]—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt left Albany at 11 o'clock tonight by train to join her husband, Gov. Roosevelt, in his western campaign trip. She will go directly to Williams, Ariz., where she will meet Mr. Roosevelt at the ranch of Mrs. John C. Greenway, Democratic national committeewoman of Arizona.

STATE IN DOUBT AS BOTH PARTIES CLAIM COLORADO

Tariff, Silver and Sugar Are Chief Issues.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.
(Chicago Tribune Press Service.)

Denver, Colo., Sept. 23.—[Special.]—Silver and sugar are the terms in which Colorado does its national political thinking. The political party that convinces Colorado it will do the most in the way of protecting and fostering the production of silver and sugar is the party that gets Colorado's electorate vote.

This time Colorado is in a state of doubt as to which of the two major parties is making the fairer promises. Both are standing for stabilization of the price of silver by international conference. Gov. Roosevelt asserting that he alone is pledging himself to call such a conference, the Republicans retorting that President Hoover already has accepted the invitation of the league of nations to participate in a world economic conference that will consider the silver question.

Freedom of Philippines.

The Republicans promise continued protection of the sugar beet growers while the Democrats advocate a "competitive tariff for revenue" and reciprocal tariff agreements with other nations the protective quality of which is a matter of dispute in the sugar beet regions. At the same time the Democrats stand for independence of the Philippines, which would operate to protect Colorado beet sugar producers from the cane sugar of those islands, while the Republican platform is silent on this question.

Gov. Roosevelt spent a few hours in Denver, but declined to declare his views on the rehabilitation of silver and the protection of sugar beets. While there is some evidence that his Topeka speech, promising some kind of vague panacea for the ills of agriculture, found favor with the wheat raisers of eastern Colorado, the Democratic candidate does not appear to have aroused any appreciable enthusiasm by his visit.

If he carries the state it will be almost entirely because of the amount of discontent and the tendency to snatch at any straw in the hope that it will bring better days.

Republican leaders admit that Hoover stock has been at a discount for several months, so much so that a Democratic sweep of the state in the November election seemed almost a foregone conclusion. But of late there have been developments inspiring their confidence that the President will carry the state, after all, by a small but sufficient plurality.

Gold Mining Is Booming.

In the first place, Colorado, being virtually without manufacturing industries and being an unimportant grain raising state, has not suffered greatly from the depression. There is unemployment in the cities, which, however, has been aided by private charity only up to date, the state having appropriated no funds therefor and having only within the last few days applied for federal aid. Gold mining is booming and as for the mining of silver, copper, lead, and zinc those industries have been prostrate for more than a decade and had no workers to speak of to be thrown out of work.

Stock raisers and sugar beet growers who constitute the backbone of the state agriculture are fairly well off, and, according to Republican State Chairman J. F. McDonald, properly credit the Republican tariff with their benefits. Stock prices have advanced materially and if sugar beet growers are to receive only $5.50 a ton this year compared with $7 two years ago it is because of collapse of world sugar prices. And while it possibly has no connection therewith, the Republican leaders are not failing to rub it in on the sugar beet farmers for temporarily forsaking the true god of protection and following after false prophets.

Two years ago the radical Democrat, Edward P. Costigan, got himself elected to the senate largely by convincing the Colorado sugar beet growers that what they need is not tariff protection, but a beet sugar bonus paid by the federal government, which he undertook to achieve. But after he reached Washington, Mr. Costigan reported that conditions were unpropitious for beet sugar bonus legislation.

Costigan's Failure to Perform.

Costigan's failure to perform is being relied upon by the Republicans to bring the errant sugar beet growers back into line in the G. O. P. Another basis of Republican hopes is the effects of the recent bitter primary fight in the Democratic party, leaving it about as badly split as were the Republicans two years ago by a similar internecine battle, which partly accounted for the election of Costigan. This time the Republicans are united, while the Democratic factions still are glaring at each other.

The Democratic fight was between John T. Barnett, leader of the conservative faction of Democrats, and Alva B. Adams, a radical who once sat in the senate by appointment and who was backed by his uncle, the venerable Gov. William H. Adams. Alva Adams defeated Barnett by a few thousand votes.

Mr. Barnett said today that much as it pained him to do so he was compelled to puncture Republican hopes that the Barnett faction would knife the Democratic ticket from Roosevelt down. He said that he and his friends are working loyally for the whole ticket and predicted that Roosevelt, who was his boyhood playmate back in New York, will carry Colorado.

Democratic Hope of Success.

Democratic expectations of success are based on the widespread hard times prejudice against the party in power, concrete evidence of which they detect in the greatly increased Democratic and decreased Republican vote in the primaries. The Democratic vote rose from 50,000 in the primary two years ago to 116,000, while the Republican vote declined from 150,000 to 103,000.

Democratic leaders estimate that 25,000 Republicans voted in the Democratic primary, in token of their intention to vote the Democratic ticket in November that many more than that number of Republicans will switch in November is the Democratic deduction from the fact that thousands of voters left the polling places without voting when they found that for the first time this year they were required to disclose their party affiliations.

Only the most resolute Republicans dare to call for Democratic ballots at the polling places. According to the Republicans, their vote declined because there was no such fight in their primary as two years ago while the Democratic vote went up because they had a more heated contest this time than in 1930.

G. O. P. for Last 12 Years.

Because Colorado has gone Republican in the last three presidential elections, the Republican leaders believe that tariff protection definitely has won the state to the G. O. P. Prior to 1920 its record was mixed. Benjamin Harrison carried the state in 1888 and Theodore Roosevelt in 1904, but Gen. Weaver the Populist candidate, won its electoral vote in 1892, Bryan in 1896, 1900, 1908, and Wilson in 1912 and 1916.

The prohibition issue has not yet clearly developed. Karl C. Schuyler, the Republican candidate for senator, and the Republican candidates for the house are standing on the Republican platform plank. In Denver, which is wet, Lawrence Lewis, the Democratic candidate for representative, is for repeal, but in the remainder of the state, which is accounted dry, the Democratic candidates are hedging on the Democratic plank.

The state will vote in November on an initiated proposal to repeal the prohibition amendment to the state constitution which was adapted before national prohibition.

TAMMANY LEADER PREDICTS BIG VOTE FOR GOV. ROOSEVELT

New York, Sept. 23.—[Special.]—John H. McCooey, Brooklyn leader, at Roosevelt headquarters today predicted that New York City's Democracy would roll up for Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt the largest majority in its history for any Democratic candidate.

John F. Curry, Tammany leader, and Mr. McCooey's ally, who, along with other greater city leaders were calling upon Mr. McCooey, said, "He is usually right," when asked to comment upon the Brooklyn leader's assertion.

Mr. McCooey is a Democratic national committeeman and has an office at Roosevelt headquarters at the Hotel Biltmore. Today was the first time that Mr. Curry, who has just been appointed a member of the Roosevelt finance committee, visited those headquarters.

The meeting of the Democratic leaders, including John Theofel of Queens, David S. Rendt of Richmond, Almon G. Rasquin of Suffolk, and Philip Krug of Nassau, was looked upon as an acknowledgement on the part of these men that Gov. Roosevelt in their opinion will be elected President of the United States this fall. Only Edward J. Flynn, Bronx leader and a Roosevelt man anyway, was absent. Mr. Flynn is in the west with the governor.

Colorado to Vote to Fill Waterman Senate Vacancy

Denver, Col., Sept. 23.—(AP)—Gov. W. H. Adams, Democrat, late today designated Nov. 8's general election as a special election to select a United States senator to succeed the late Charles W. Waterman, Republican. Republicans have selected Karl C. Schuyler as a candidate for Waterman's unexpired term. The Democrats have not yet named a candidate. Gov. Adams probably will make an ad interim appointment.

COLORED POSTERS URGE VOTERS TO 'TURN DEMOCRAT'

Colorful posters and slogans advising voters to "turn Democratic" and designed to win independent and Republican voters, were placed on exhibit yesterday by the new independent headquarters in the Congress hotel.

Opening of the headquarters next Monday was announced on Thursday by Mrs. George Sass. The headquarters will support Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt for President and Judge Henry Horner for governor of Illinois.

Gen. A. F. Lorenzen, a close friend of Gov. Roosevelt, is the originator of the slogan, "turn Democratic," which is to be used by the independent committee.

THE LAW CALLS FOR "MARY DOE" AND 8 ANSWER

When Policewoman Sarah A. Kroll walked into the women's quarters of Hadine avenue station yesterday and called for "Mary Doe," eight women stepped forward.

"Either they refused to give their right names or they were so drunk they couldn't remember them," the policewoman confided to Wagonmen Thomas Sullivan and John Quinn. "I wouldn't care, but, five got to send five of them to the Chicago avenue court, one to Town Hall, and two to the Morals court."

The policemen solved the problem by having the "Mary Does" draw lots from a hat to determine in which court they would appear.

GANDHI WEAKENS; RUSH PLAN SO HE MAY END HIS FAST

Holy Man Suffers from Nausea and Giddiness.

POONA, India, Sept. 23.—(AP)—Disquieting news that the Mahatma Gandhi had taken a sharp turn for the worse came from Yeravda jail tonight after the Nationalist leader had gone for 32 hours without food in protest against the electoral system devised for Indian legislatures by the British government.

The mahatma was afflicted with nausea and giddiness. His voice was becoming more feeble and it was with difficulty that he kept his eyes open. Physically he was distinctly weaker.

The news of his condition resulted in a sudden frightened dash to the jail by political leaders representing the caste Hindus and the untouchables, who were conferring about an electoral scheme of their own in the hope that it might prove acceptable to the mahatma.

Gandhi Makes Suggestions.

The particular point in the British electoral scheme to which the mahatma objected is the establishment of separate electorates for the depressed classes. The representatives of the untouchables and the caste Hindus had reached a point when they went to the prison tonight at which the mahatma's advice was imperative.

The feeble and wasted mystic received them, heard their stories and made suggestions of his own. The meeting took place under a mango tree in the prison yard and lasted 40 minutes. The negotiations will be resumed tomorrow.

Strong hopes were expressed that it would be possible tomorrow to sign an agreement and cable it immediately to Prime Minister MacDonald in London.

Holy Man Is Excited.

The effect of this optimism was clearly visible in Gandhi. Calling upon his reserves of nervous energy he threw off his earlier weakness and conversed excitedly with his intimates until a late hour.

Sir Tej Bahadur Sapru has submitted a compromise plan which calls for joint electorates for the higher caste Hindus and the untouchables, with safeguards for the latter. Both sides have agreed on that part of the plan which concerns primary and final elections for untouchable representatives to legislatures.

The spokesman for the untouchables, however, insists on the provision of funds for educational facilities, the right of appeal to the viceroy, and appointment of untouchables in the government service.

Among the day's callers on the holy man were Mrs. Gandhi, a number of the Mahatma's political associates, and several leaders of the depressed classes. He asked them to circulate his appeal to the people of India to refrain from fasting with him.

50 Hurt in Riot.

Gandhi's Aid Lands in U. S.

New York, Sept. 23.—(AP)—Vithalbhai J. Patel, second in command of the Indian Nationalist movement, arrived today to preach the gospel of the fasting Gandhi to the American people. He came convinced that his leader would not die in his controversy with the British government but that if he did "India would not be safe for Englishmen." Patel, 59 years old and white bearded, is president of the Indian legislative assembly, a position similar to the speakership of the American house of representatives. He is also a former mayor of Bombay. He is one of Gandhi's closest confidantes.

JAPANESE PLANE RACES FOR NOME WITH CREW OF 3

BULLETIN.

TOKIO, Sept. 24 [Saturday]—(AP)—A radio message from the Japan-America Good Will plane, intercepted by the Ochiishi radio station at 2:35 p. m., Tokio time today [1:35 a. m. Chicago daylight time], said the plane had passed over the mountains on Paramushiru island, northernmost of the Kuriles. The island is just south of Kamchatka and about half way between Tokio and Nome, Alaska.

SAMUSHIRO, Japan, Sept. 24 [Saturday,]—(AP)—A good will plane sponsored by the newspaper Hochi Shimbun took off this morning for Nome, Alaska, en route to San Francisco. The takeoff was at 5:35 a. m. [3:35 p. m. Friday, Chicago daylight saving time].

Three hours after its departure from Samushiro, famous trans-Pacific jump off point in northern Japan, the plane was flying steadily northeast toward Nome in good weather.

At 7:20 a. m. the ship passed Cape Erimo, on Hokkaido, the northernmost island of Japan. Subsequently it communicated with the Ochiishi radio station asking for the latest weather reports.

The plane carried fuel for 40 hours' flying and the three flyers aboard hoped to cover the 2,670 miles to Nome in a little more than 30 hours.

Their best cruising speed is about 85 miles an hour, and without mishap they should arrive in Nome before 5 p. m. Saturday, Alaska time [10 p. m. Chicago time.]

The purpose of the flight is to increase good will between Japan and the United States. Members of the plane's crew are Eiichiro Baba, pilot; Kiyoshi Honma, navigator, and Tomoyoshi Ishita, radio operator.

The schedule calls for stops at Nome and Fairbanks in Alaska. The plane has one 350 horsepower motor.

Von Gronau at Shanghai.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

SHANGHAI, Sept. 23.—Capt. Wolfgang von Gronau, German aviator who is flying around the world with three companions, arrived here today after a flight from Kayoshima, Japan.

OTHER PACIFIC FLIGHTS.

Two American aviators, Hugh Herndon Jr. and Clyde Pangborn, were the first men ever to make a nonstop flight from Japan to the United States in a heavier than air machine. They accomplished the feat on Oct. 6, 1931, landing at Wenatchee, Wash., after a 4,000 mile hop, winning a $25,000 prize from a Japanese newspaper.

Four crossings of the North Pacific in easy stages have been made, but seven attempted flights have failed. One of the most recent of the successful flights was made by Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh.

Other successful flights:

May 3, 1924: From Dutch Harbor Alaska, to Minato, Japan, by three army planes under the command of Lieut. Lowell H. Smith.

The Graf Zeppelin in 1930 flew from Tokio to Los Angeles.

Forced Down in Alaska.

Aug. 2, 1924: Maj. Stuart A. MacLaren forced to land at Nikolski, Alasko, 1,600 miles from the starting point, Minato, Japan.

Sept. 14, 1930: Harold Bromley and Harold Gatty, attempting to fly from Japan to the United States, were forced back after covering 1,000 miles.

May 4, 1930: Seiji Yoshihara started from Tokio for the United States, but grounded at Numasaki.

Republican headquarters put out a letter written by William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, to William L. Hutcheson, general president of the Brotherhood of Carpenters, who is serving as chief of the labor bureau at national headquarters, saying the federation has not given an indorsement to any presidential candidate and that it will adhere to its traditional "nonpartisan political policy."

Elihu Root has accepted the post of honorary president of the National Hoover-Curtis Lawyers' association. Harry F. Hamlin, former municipal judge, has been selected as chairman for Chicago and Cook county to organize the lawyers in behalf of Hoover.

GOOD TIDINGS TO HOOVER

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Sept. 23.—[Special.]—President Hoover, who has been hearing little but bad news from the political prophets since the disastrous Maine election, was heartened today by word from party leaders in Illinois, New York and Massachusetts that the prospects for his carrying those states were improved.

Following the receipt of this more cheerful news officials close to the President said that Mr. Hoover was now opposed to a campaign tour to the far west and would confine his political activities outside of Washington to the middle west, the east, and the territory in between.

The President was represented as confident that Gov. Roosevelt's invasion of California would not be productive of sufficient votes to put it in the Democratic column.

Will Speak in New York.

The President, it was said, will invade New York, the home of Gov. Roosevelt, the latter part of October for his one speech in the east. Some time later the President will turn westward again for another address. At present the choice seems to be between Ohio and Indiana, with an outside chance Mr. Hoover may go to Michigan.

An Illinois delegation headed by David E. Shanahan, speaker of the state house of representatives, and Richard J. Barr, Republican leader in the state senate, called at the White House and found the President considerably worried about conditions in their state. They told the President that the overthrow of the La Follettes in Wisconsin had improved the Hoover-Curtis prospects in Illinois, one spokesman predicting that the state would give the President a majority of 200,000.

The Illinois delegation spent about twenty minutes with the President. During that time the whole Illinois political situation was gone over frankly. The delegation found that that the President's apprehension over the Illinois situation was due partly to reports to the effect that the headliners on the state ticket were proving a burden to the national ticket.

Predicts 200,000 Majority.

"I told the President," Mr. Shanahan said, "that I was confident that Illinois would roll up a majority of 200,000 for the Hoover-Curtis ticket. I told him that conditions had been improved by the results in Wisconsin indicating a loss of strength by the radicals. I also expressed the opinion that Illinois Republicans were satisfied with the President's attitude on prohibition as announced in his acceptance speech."

In addition to Mr. Shanahan and Speaker Barr, the Illinois group included State Senator James J. Barbour, Representative Elmer Schnackenberg, Republican floor leader; State Representative Roger F. Little, State Representative Roland V. Libonati, and Representative Carl Chindblom, defeated in the last Republican primary.

Claims New York for Hoover.

William M. Calder, former senator from New York, brought the tidings to the White House that President Hoover would carry New York state beyond the shadow of a doubt. John Richardson, national committeeman from Boston, spent a few minutes with the President this afternoon and then stated that conditions were looking up for the Republican party in that state.

Henry I. Harriman, president of the United States Chamber of Commerce, reported to the President that business conditions were improving in New England and in several other sections of the country. He described the middle west as a sore spot from a business standpoint with the farmers restive because of low prices quoted for their products.

BACKS HORNER

Attorney Charles P. Barnes, former county judge of McHenry county, a Republican, has issued a statement announcing he will back Judge Henry Horner, Democrat, for governor. Mr. Barnes declared it would be a disgrace for Illinois to elect Len Small. He urged other Republicans to follow his stand. He resides in Woodstock.

HOOVER IS WRITING DES MOINES SPEECH; CANNOT SEE CERMAK

Washington, D. C., Sept. 23.—[Special.]—Before boarding a train this afternoon Mayor A. J. Cermak, who had appeared before the R. F. C. to plead for a $9,000,000 loan for Illinois relief, called at the White House in the company of Representative Carl K. Chindblom.

The mayor had no appointment and learned on arrival that the President was closeted in the Lincoln study, presumably to work on his coming Des Moines speech.

After waiting a short time the mayor was told that the President could not see him until 5 o'clock. Explaining that his train left at five minutes past four, Mayor Cermak departed.

HORNER SPOOFS OPPONENT OVER RIVER BALLYHOO

Crowds Enjoy Banter of Candidate.

BY PERCY WOOD.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Belleville, Ill., Sept. 23.—[Special.]—Now that the merry persiflage of Len Small's "waterway" campaign tour around the liquid borders of Illinois has disappeared in the mists of the past, Judge Henry Horner, Small's Democratic opponent, gave an evaluation of its worth today to three southern Illinois audiences.

The judge and the candidates who accompany him—John C. Martin of Salem, candidate for state treasurer, and Martin A. Brennan of Bloomington, candidate for congressman at large—entered St. Clair county tonight after traversing Illinois from the Indiana to the Missouri lines. He spoke in Bruce Campbell's territory to a packed hall and gained riotous approval of his concise platform for the management of the state government.

Detracts Attention from Issues.

"This comic opera reminds me of the gladiatorial contests, the bull fights, the feasts, and the spectacles staged by the decadent emperors of antiquity to keep the attention of their people from the affairs of government," he said.

"But in Illinois today the voters are too much concerned with their own problems to be diverted by ballyhoo. This excursion undertaken by my opponent has accomplished nothing for the Illinois waterway. Wouldn't it have been better if he and his campaign manager, the thoroughly discredited former mayor of Chicago, had enlisted the attention of the people in the plight of the rail employes in Illinois who are unemployed today.

"I am far more concerned in their plight than I am in churning the waters of the Illinois, the Mississippi, and the Ohio rivers in search of political support."

Crowds Enjoy Banter.

This raillery and banter took well with today's crowds. But they became instantly serious and sympathetic as Judge Horner delivered his program of tax reduction, repeal of the prohibition law and the kind of farm aid wanted by the dirt farmers.

Before his Mount Vernon speech, Judge Horner, Mr. Martin, and Mr. Brennan were guests of Waller Buckham, candidate for clerk of the Appellate court in that district, in an inspection of the local fair. The speeches were delivered from a platform facing the large grandstand across the race track. Then the party began its trek across the state to Belleville.

APPEAL TO 200,000 NEGROES.

With an appeal to 200,000 Negro voters in the metropolitan area of Chicago to break the "domination of Len Small and the old combine," the Illinois Liberty league yesterday came out for Judge Henry Horner, Democratic candidate for governor. The league, which claims 5,000 members on the south side, has William Walker for its president and Alfred F. Spencer for its state commander. The league formerly was known as the Abraham Lincoln club. It is nonpartisan.

A statement given out by Mr. Spencer reads as follows:

"We are for Judge Henry Horner for governor because we have been informed by some of the most valuable citizens of Chicago that he is efficient, honest and trustworthy. We have every reason to believe Judge Horner will be a governor for all of the people, irrespective of creed or color.

"The object of the Liberty league is to create a new and better leadership among the colored citizens of our city and state. In Chicago and its near suburbs are 200,000 voters of our group, most of them on the south side.

"Under the old leadership, an ex-mayor of Chicago and ex-Gov. Small have claimed us as 'vest pocket votes.' In fact, this accounts for the ex-mayor getting the Republican renomination in the last primary. This and similar political evils which have come about in our section of the city can rightfully be laid at the doors of the old leaders in our district.

"It must be kept in mind that all of the old Republican leaders of our race are out for Small. Naturally they would be, for they are the few Negroes who have drunk freely from the stream patronage controlled by these two men, and they have benefited at the expense of the black folks.

"The Liberty league invites the support of all the Republicans as well as of Democrats to help us to free ourselves in the black belt from the domination of the old Small combination."

POLICE BREAK UP NO. SIDE HOLDUP; CAPTURE THREE

Second Victim of Gun Battle Dies.

CRIMINAL COURT.

James Dorsey, robbery, sentenced to 1 to 20 years in the penitentiary; Peter Rosenbach, robbery, sentenced to 1 year in the Bridewell by Judge Frystalski.

Rodzo Di Dominico, larceny, sentenced 1 to 10 years in Pontiac reformatory; Tony Wojcik, robbery, sentenced to 1 year to life in the penitentiary; Lee Toney, larceny, sentenced to 1 year in Pontiac reformatory by Judge Philip L. Sullivan.

Garfield Daniels, robbery, sentenced to 1 year to life in the penitentiary by Judge John J. Sullivan.

Three of five robbers were captured last evening after they had attempted to rob a handbook in the rear of 4017 Sheridan road. Three Lincoln park policemen interrupted the holdup and fired a number of shots after the bandits as they fled, while pedestrians at the busy intersection of Sheridan road and Irving Park boulevard scurried for shelter.

The men captured were James Hardy, 26 years old, 4922 West Erie street; Louis Jacobs, 25 years old, 3242 Cortez street, and George Tanners, 26 years old. Tanners was bruised and cut in a struggle with the police.

Throw Away Shotguns.

The robbers threw away two sawed-off shotguns and a revolver as they fled. Hardy and Jacobs were captured near the scene of the attempted holdup and Tanners was found hiding in the coal bin in a basement nearby.

Hardy, under the fire of the police, ran up the rear stairs to the third floor at 4025 Sheridan road, where he tossed his revolver into a waste basket on the porch and, forcing open the screen door, entered the flat of Mrs. Emily Gierman. Mrs. Gierman feared that her two police dogs would attack the robber and cause him to shoot, so she held them while he ran through her flat and down the front stairway to the street, where he was seized by policemen at the front.

Bandit Victim Dies.

William Walsh, 28 years old, of 7700 Aberdeen street, died this morning in the Little Company of Mary hospital of a bullet wound received early yesterday from a bandit gun. He was shot in the abdomen in a revolver battle between his companion, Policeman William Kenney of the state's attorney's office, and five robbers. One of the gunmen was slain by Kenney and another was wounded and captured.

The attempted robbery and gun fight occurred at 85th street and Racine avenue. Kenney and Walsh were on their way home from a political banquet when their car stalled. Another car, containing the five gunmen, drew alongside them. Two of the gunmen alighted and announced they were robbers.

Opens Fire on Bandits.

Policeman Kenney opened fire on them, killing a youth later identified as Albert Schwartz, 17 years old, of 5211 South Halsted street, a former Tilden High school student. The robbers returned the fire, hitting Walsh. Policeman Kenney fired again and William [Bull] O'Brien, an ex-convict, dropped. The other men escaped. O'Brien was taken to the Bridewell hospital. He now faces a murder charge.

BANDITS INVADE FLATS AND ROB AND BIND VICTIMS

Three robbers invaded two apartments at 816 Drexel square yesterday morning and robbed two women and a man living there. They obtained clothing and jewels worth $700.

Mrs. Margaret Lane, 31 years old, and Mrs. Marie Tucker, 28 years old, and Joseph Williams, who lives in an apartment across the hall from the women, were the victims. The bandits forced their way into the women's apartment, and Williams, hearing the noise, opened his door. The bandits took all three into Williams' apartment while they ransacked the women's apartment.

The victims were tied with rope and the robbers called a taxicab. When the driver, Fred Liepe, 5750 Normal boulevard, appeared he also was tied up and the bandits drove off in the cab, which they later abandoned on the south side.

CUTTING QUITS AS NEW MEXICO LEADER OF G. O. P.

Acts as Convention Unseats Him.

Albuquerque, N. M., Sept. 23.—[Special.]—Senator Bronson Cutting late tonight faced the Republican state convention and in a one sentence speech resigned as Republican national committeeman.

"As one who has been unseated I hereby resign as national committeeman," he said as he turned and left the platform.

The convention had just the moment before voted to seat a contesting delegation from the senator's home county with half a vote along with the Cutting delegation.

A motion to table the resignation was lost.

Breaks with Party.

Cutting's decision to break with the party came Friday when he called 300 followers to a separate auditorium and told them that he would not feel bound to support any ticket elected by delegations that were seated fraudulently. He declared that if the convention seated two disputed delegations his own and one other county, it would constitute fraud and disfranchisement of the voters of those counties.

Referring to his selection as national committeeman last spring, Senator Cutting, speaking before the convention regarding the contests, said:

"If you want to reverse your judgment I can show you that I can accept the result with equanimity."

Simms May Succeed Him.

"I cannot serve you if your confidence in me is withdrawn," he said.

It was taken then as a threat to resign as national committeeman, but old guard leaders were willing to accept his resignation and it was predicted that Cutting's successor would be Albert G. Simms, former congressman, who married Ruth Hanna McCormick of Illinois.

SERBIANS HERE WILL DEDICATE NEW CATHEDRAL

Thousands of Chicago Serbians will witness the laying of the corner stone of the Holy Resurrection cathedral of the Serbian Eastern Orthodox church at Evergreen avenue and Fowler street at 10 o'clock tomorrow morning.

The cathedral will be a reproduction of a Serbian church built more than 700 years ago. The interior will be of modern design, however, and in construction a departure from old world churches.

The place of honor at tomorrow's ceremonies will be occupied by John Vicetich, 80 years old, who came to Chicago 65 years ago. Samuel Shakota will be master of ceremonies, with the Rev. Father Peter O. Stivachich officiating at the services.

U. OF PITTSBURGH MAKES STUDENTS PLEDGE LOYALTY

Pittsburgh, Pa., Sept. 23.—(AP)—A pledge to observe the laws of the nation, the state and the school handed to students to sign as they registered today caused a mild sensation on the University of Pittsburgh campus.

Those who declined to sign the cards were not permitted to register. All but a few complied.

"While I am a student at the University of Pittsburgh," the pledge reads, "I pledge, upon my honor, loyalty and allegiance to the constitution of the United States of America and to the constitution and laws of the state of Pennsylvania; and I pledge, upon my honor, loyalty in spirit and in action to the purposes and regulations of the University of Pittsburgh."

The pledge cards appeared after Judge M. A. Musmanno criticized the university for permitting the arrest of three students who protested against the commencement address of Maj. Gen. Douglas McArthur in June.

Body of Church Society Solicitor Found in River

Gerald Grace, 53 years old, 6353 South May street, a solicitor for the Catholic Church Extension society, 360 North Michigan avenue, was found dead yesterday in a foot of water in the north branch of the river near the Devon avenue bridge. After viewing the scene a brother, Sergt. Steve Grace of the Des Plaines street station, said he believed Gerald had fallen to his death following a heart attack. Grace was unmarried. The body was removed to the county morgue.

Sportsman Is Held Up in Hallway of Home

Emil Thiry, well known in the sports world, was held up by two men in the hallway of his home at 525 Barry avenue last night and robbed of $500 and an $800 diamond ring. The men evidently followed him from downtown. They tried to strong arm him, but when he resisted one of the robbers threatened him with a gun.

Two Miners Are Killed While Blasting Out Coal

Herrin, Ill., Sept. 23.—(AP)—Jeff Goddard, 50, and W. G. Ward, 39, miners of Marion, were killed in a small slope mine near Crab Orchard tonight by a dynamite explosion set off to blast out coal.

DENIED OLD AID PENSION.

Milwaukee, Wis., Sept. 23.—[Special.]—County Judge Michael S. Sheridan today refused to approve an old age pension for Julius Hansen, 70, who rooms at 530 North 8th street, because he left his wife and five children in 1902 without contributing to their support.

FARM HOLIDAY LEADERS REPORT PLAN'S SPREAD

Des Moines, Ia., Sept. 23.—(AP)—Quotations and trends at middle west markets and shipping centers today reflected varying progress for the farmers' peaceful campaign for higher prices as leaders of the movement expressed satisfaction with results so far.

President Milo Reno of the National Farm Holiday association, which Wednesday called upon sympathizers in eleven states to withhold marketing of live stock and grain in hope the embargo would achieve prices equaling costs of production, pointed out the drive had not yet advanced far enough so its results might be accurately gauged by market data.

Says Idea Is Spreading.

John Chalmers, president of the Iowa holiday unit, asserted "the movement is highly successful" as related efforts were reported under way in Adams Center, N. Y., Omaha, Neb., and Atlanta, Ga., with increases in milk prices as their objectives.

At 31 concentration yards and packing plants in Iowa and southern Minnesota, center of the nonselling movement, hog receipts were 16,000, as against 15,700 a year ago. Prices were steady or lower.

Receipts of hogs and sheep at Sioux City were about normal and quotations mostly steady to 5 cents higher. At Chicago receipts were normal, hog prices steady to weak.

Grain Markets Unaffected.

Leaders in Chippewa, Lac Qui Parle and Yellow Medicine counties, Minnesota, ordered picketing of highways in an attempt to prevent marketing of the nonperishable goods.

Farmers near Minot, N. D., insisted they were successful in convincing truckers not to market nonperishables.

A committee representing 150 milk producers at Adams Center, N. Y., served notice on the United Milk Products corporation that if price cutting was not eliminated no milk would be shipped into the company's plant beginning tonight. ILLINOIS PLEADS FOR $9,000,000 TO AID JOBLESS

Leaders Say Relief Plans Wait on Election.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Sept. 23.—[Special.]—Until the November elections have been decided, it is a political impossibility to get the Illinois legislature to adopt an adequate relief program, Chicago spokesmen told the board of the Reconstruction Finance corporation, today, as they filed formal application for a $9,050,000 loan.

The delegation, which came to plead for this addition to the $9,000,000 already advanced to Illinois, was the largest and most official yet to appear.

Mayor Anton J. Cermak headed the Chicago group. Speaker David E. Shanahan of the Illinois house, State Senator Richard J. Barr and Thomas J. Courtney and State Representatives Michael L. Igoe and Elmer J. Schnackenberg led a committee from the general assembly. Chairman Edward D. Ryerson Jr., represented the emergency relief commission.

Describe Needs of Jobless.

One after another they described the need of Illinois' unemployed, particularly in Cook county to the corporations' board of directors headed by Chairman Atlee Pomerene.

Then through De Witt Billman, representing Gov. L. L. Emmerson, the application for a loan was filed.

The application will be acted upon not later than tomorrow. There was no indication of what the corporation would decide, though one prediction was that $5,000,000 of the loan would be granted now, with judgment reserved on the remainder until it is seen what action the Illinois legislature takes when it meets next week.

As usual it was this question of what the state itself would do that interested the corporation's directors. Mr. Pomerene offered the corporation's coöperation, but was anxious to know what Illinois proposed to do after the failure of the special session to take any action to date.

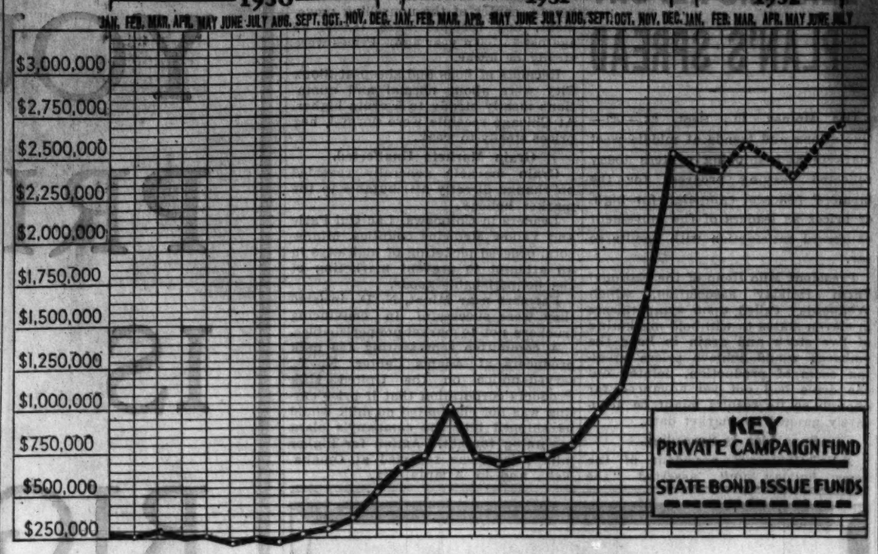
Engage in Frank Discussion.

It was then that the frank discussion of the Illinois situation took place. All the members of the house and half the members of the senate are running for reëlection, Chicagoans on the delegation explained. It might be possible to pass the two bills recently decided on, one for diversion of the gasoline tax funds by counties, and the other for a county sales tax, it was said, but members from districts where the relief need was slight were afraid to risk their political fortunes by voting for any state-wide raising of new funds.

With $9,050,000 the relief requirements until Nov. 15 could be met, the directors were told. By that time the elections would be over and another special session of the assembly could be called, at which some program might be adopted.

Mayor Cermak and other members of the delegation expressed themselves as pleased by the reception given them at the corporation. Among others in the delegation were State Senator James J. Barbour, State Representatives David McCluggage, Michael Fahy, Roger F. Little, and Roland V. Libonati, Emmett Whealan, chairman of the Cook county board; William H. Sexton, Chicago corporation counsel, and Wilfred S. Reynolds, executive secretary of the state relief committee. Representative Carl R. Chindblom [Rep., Ill.] also accompanied the delegation.

CHARTING THE FLOW OF RELIEF FUNDS



RELIEF BONDS O. K.'D BY MOTOR CLUB DIRECTORS

Oppose Further Gas Tax Charity.

Directors of the Chicago Motor club, in a special session attended by Douglas Sutherland, secretary of the Civic federation, adopted a resolution yesterday supporting the $20,000,000 relief bond issue in the referendum election this fall, but opposing any additional special tax on motorists or diversion of road funds for charity purposes.

The bonds, which received the club's indorsement, are to be retired from the counties' share of the gasoline tax revenue. They are to be sold to pay $18,750,000 borrowed by the state to keep relief stations open last winter.

Bills Opposed by Club.

The measures opposed by the club consist of a group of bills pending in the special session of legislature, which will resume its deliberation next week. These include a proposal that counties issue bonds without referendum, the money to be spent for relief and the debt to be paid from the counties' share of the gasoline revenue. Other proposals would increase the gasoline tax to obtain money for charity this winter.

"Chicago received the bulk of this relief money last winter," said Mr. Sutherland. "It's the duty of Chicago to support the bond issue. If the bond issue passes the debt will be retired over a period of 20 years without any new tax. In the first year $1,600,000 will come from Cook county's $4,400,000 gas tax income.

"If the bond issue fails to pass the entire debt must be paid in a statewide personal and realty property levy next year. We must keep faith with friendly downstate legislators who helped us keep our relief stations open last winter."

"I agree with what you have said," replied Charles M. Hayes, president of the Motor club, "but this demand upon automobile owners to pay a charity obligation which belongs to society as a whole must not go too far. The motorists will pay this $20,000,000 bond issue, but let that be the limit of the special taxes upon automobile owners for charity."

1,184 Given Employment.

Records of the Cook county highway department indicate that 1,184 men receive employment through the expenditure of $1,600,000 for road building rather than for charity. With dependents, the total supported by $1,600,000 worth of road building would reach 4,736.

The county is now spending $3,500,000 a year for construction from its $4,400,000 share of the gasoline tax.

Exceeds 33 Million

In two years and seven months Chicago has raised and spent for unemployment relief a total of $33,521,437, not counting the cost of administering those funds. That total included the $4,957,424.39 raised by the governor's commission on unemployment relief in 1930, the $10,412,181.24 raised by the Joint Emergency Relief Fund of Cook County, Inc., in 1931, and the $18,750,000 raised by the passage of a state bond issue last February for the state at large.

The chart shows how expenditures for relief in Chicago have fluctuated month by month from January, 1930, until last July, the month before federal funds from the Reconstruction Finance corporation were first received by Illinois to continue relief work. The cost of relief in January, 1930, was $274,827, which included all expenditures, both public and private. The cost for last July was $2,695,836.86, including public and private expenditures.

The estimated cost of relief this winter has been set by the Illinois Emergency Relief commission at more than the entire cost for the preceding 31 months. The statistics upon which the chart was based were supplied by the Council of Social Agencies of Chicago.

CHIEFS O. K. CUT IN POLICE WAGE FOR NEW YORK

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Sept. 23.—[Special.]—The heads of the five policemen's organizations gave their unofficial approval today to Mayor Joseph V. McKee's plan for voluntary reduction of salaries over $2,000 by 5 to 20 per cent, which will cut the police department pay roll by $5,000,000.

The final decision, however, will be made on Monday afternoon by 500 delegates from the organization.

The plan calls for these reductions: 5 per cent in the salaries of patrolmen and civilian employés earning from $2,000 to $3,000 a year; 8 1-3 per cent in salaries of patrolmen and sergeants exceeding $3,000; 10 per cent in the pay of lieutenants; 12½ per cent for captains, inspectors and deputy chief inspector; 15 per cent for chief inspector and deputy police commissioners, and 20 per cent in the pay of Commissioner Mulrooney.

While the association's leaders were taking this action, Deputy Controller Frank J. Prial, president of the Civil Service forum, issued a statement opposing the mayor's plan.

Another development today in the municipal political situation was the issuance by Supreme Court Justice John E. McGeehan of a preëmptory mandamus staying the board of elections from making any preparations for a special mayoralty election Nov. 8. This cleared the way for an appeal. It has already been agreed that the Appellate division will hear the appeal next Tuesday.

Receiver Sues Waukegan Bank Official for $5,000

Suit for $5,000 was filed yesterday in the Circuit court at Waukegan against Milton E. Smith, director and vice president of the closed Waukegan State bank, by L. E. Hulse, receiver for the bank. Smith is charged with drawing $1,018 from the bank after banking hours on June 17, 1931, the day it closed. An indictment charging him with larceny is pending.

BOUL MICH WILL GET PROGRESSIVE TRAFFIC LIGHTS

So. Parks Order Start on Speedier System.

BY HAL FOUST.

The installation of a progressive traffic light control system in Michigan avenue was assured yesterday. Edward J. Kelly, president of the south park board, announced that a meeting will be called on Monday to arrange for coöperation in the work by the south parks, Lincoln park, and the city of Chicago.

On motion of Commissioner Michael L. Igoe, the south park board, without a dissenting vote, has directed its general superintendent, George Donoghue, to start work on the improvement, which will save an average of two minutes for 75,000 automobiles using the boulevard daily. The city and Lincoln park for some time have approved the proposed change of the light system.

To Be Ready for Fair.

"The new lights," said Mr. Kelly, will be in operation soon enough for any wrinkles in the plans to be smoothed before the world's fair opens next year. Any delay in starting this work has been due to our desire for study to make sure that the new lights would benefit traffic. The North La Salle street lights, in a year's operation, have proved the efficiency of progressive control."

"This is good news to the motoring public," said Col. A. A. Sprague, city commissioner of public works. "The new lights will not only save time for Michigan avenue traffic, but they also will help in moving vehicles in and out of the loop on the east and west streets. The city will do its share in installing the new system and in making it a success."

Warren Wright, president of the Lincoln park board, was not in the city yesterday, but Otto Weege, general superintendent, said the president and the other Lincoln park commissioners had expressed themselves as favoring a modernization of Michigan avenue traffic control.

"The park engineers are already at work on the details," said Mr. Weege. "I am enthusiastic about the improvement, being especially desirous of eliminating this racing for the lights that is encouraged by our present stop-and-go system."

Described by Engineer.

George Barton, engineer for the Chicago Motor club, described some details of the plans.

"With the proposed system," he said, "motorists will be able to proceed in Michigan avenue at posted speeds without being stopped by a red light. Maximum speeds will be reduced to probably 27 or 28 miles an hour, but with the stops eliminated the driving time from 22d street to Oak street will be reduced from 13 minutes and 40 seconds to 8 minutes and 40 seconds, a saving of five minutes for those who use the entire system.

"Cross traffic will not be held for much more than half the present wait for the red light to get on to the boulevard. Pedestrians will not have to wait so long to cross the pavement with the lights.

Timing to Be Decided.

"There are many details to be worked out by engineers of the three governmental bodies, such as the adjustment to regulate the timing of lights to meet the changing conditions during different periods of the day at each intersection, but traffic should be moving under the new control system before Feb. 1.

"The governmental bodies will also have to determine how many refinements of the system they can inaugurate at this time. These include auxiliary lights, possibly with cut back curbs, to accommodate a continuous right turn movement into the boulevard regardless of whether traffic is moving in Michigan. Proposed refinements also include staggering the safety islands so that left turn vehicles will occupy one instead of two and a half lines in the middle of the pavement."

Michigan avenue north of the bridge is under Lincoln jurisdiction. Between the bridge and Randolph street is city territory, while the south parks rule south of Randolph street.

BANKERS CONFER WITH SZYMCZAK ON WARRANT SALE

City Controller Szymczak conferred yesterday with several Chicago bankers regarding the purchase of sufficient tax anticipation warrants to pay the salaries of city and school board employés. Later he said he had no report to make, but added that the bankers would confer with Mayor Cermak on the latter's return from Washington.

While the mayor was in Europe some warrants were sold to the banks, the proceeds being used to pay city employés only. It a purchase is made by the banks next week, it is regarded in the city hall as extremely likely that it will be in an amount sufficient to allow the city to invest in school board warrants and give the teachers a pay day.

The county board adopted a resolution yesterday providing for the sale of $450,000 of 1931 corporate fund tax anticipation warrants to a syndicate of banks. The funds are to be used to provide a half month's pay for county workers.

Robt. M. Hutchins Knight of the Legion of Honor

President Robert Maynard Hutchins of the University of Chicago yesterday was notified that he had been made a knight of the Legion of Honor of France. The honor will be conferred formally at a later date by Rene Weiller, French consul at Chicago. Prof. Hutchins was knighted for his services to education, it was said.

INDIANA SEEKS $127,000 FROM TWO FORMER OFFICIALS

Two suits for the recovery of $127,000 of public funds wre filed in the Lake county [Ind.] Circuit court today against two former township officials who are alleged to have expended the money illegally. Attorney General James M. Ogden of Indiana filed the petitions.

The defendants are Erick Lund, formerly trustee of North township, from whom $98,760 is sought, and John M. McFadden, once assessor of Calumet township, from whom $28,859 is demanded.

Lund, charged with conspiring with physicians for overcharges against the township's medical poor relief fund, has been convicted in the Circuit court and sentenced to two to fourteen years in the penitentiary. His case is now being appealed. McFadden has been indicted for alleged pay roll padding, but has not been tried.

HELD PRISONER BY DR. EASTMAN, WITNESS SAYS

Threatened by Hospital Head, He Testifies.

Dr. Lewis K. Eastman, owner of the Keystone hospital, 1623 North Kostner avenue, who is on trial before the medical committee of the state department of registration and education on charges of malpractice, yesterday heard a witness testify that he had been kidnaped by the doctor, threatened with mutilation and held a prisoner in the Keystone hospital. Dr. Eastman if found guilty, faces the revocation of his state license.

The witness was John A. Dunn, a contractor of 4033 West Adams street, who testified that the kidnaping occured when his car and a car driven by Dr. Eastman's chauffeur collided in 1925. Although he was not injured, he was taken forcibly to the Keystone hospital by Dr. Eastman and several men who had been occupants of the Eastman car, Dunn said.

Charges Threat by Doctor.

Dunn testified that he was taken to an emergency operating room, where Dr. Eastman threatened to mutilate him if he did not pay for the damages to the doctor's car. The men who took him to the hospital drew revolvers to intimidate him, he said. He was held a prisoner for several hours in a room with a heavily screened window, Dunn added.

In answer to questions of Assistant Attorney General Philip Ringer yesterday morning Dr. Eastman denied that he had ever held any one forcibly in his hospital, or that any one had ever been taken to his hospital forcibly. Dunn testified that he had been awarded $200 damages in a civil suit against Dr. Eastman, based on the kidnaping.

Dr. Eastman also was questioned on the activities of a former assistant of his, Harry Lea, who was not a licensed physician. He said that Lea had never been permitted to diagnose or treat patients with his consent or knowledge.

Reads Previous Testimony.

Following Dr. Eastman's testimony that he had tried to get the consent of Frank Pajewski for the amputation of his right leg from the first day he entered the hospital, Mr. Ringer read Dr. Eastman's testimony in a damage suit, in which Pajewski was awarded damages for the amputation. Dr. Eastman had said that he had "let nature take its course" until amputation became necessary. Dr. Eastman denied that there was a discrepancy between the two statements.

The doctor charged that two agents of the state department had tried to intimidate one of his witnesses, Dr. Robert A. McCulley, who was formerly associated with him at the Keystone hospital. Dr. McCulley testified at a previous hearing that the hospital was conducted ethically. Dr. Eastman declared that Dr. McCulley, who now practices in Pecatonica, Ill., was warned by the agents that he would lose his license if he testified for Dr. Eastman.

UNIDENTIFIED WOMAN KILLED BY AUTOMOBILE

An unidentified woman, about 44 years old, was fatally injured by an automobile at Wells street and North avenue late last night. She was taken to the Augustana hospital, where she died, by Carl J. Hudell, 9958 South Hamilton avenue, the driver. The woman was plainly attired and apparently lived in the neighborhood.

Albert Bloom, 40 years old, of 137 South 13th avenue, Maywood, a painter, was killed last night by a car which did not stop after the accident. The accident occurred at 19th avenue and Oak street, Maywood.

Walter Lowry, 71 years old, of 3513 Wenonah avenue, Berwyn, a bookkeeper, was fatally injured by an automobile yesterday at Washington boulevard and Canal street. The driver, Joseph Schaffer, 24 years old, 616 Rush street, took him to the Presbyterian hospital, where he died.

Peter Morges, 19 years old, 718 8th street, Waukegan, was killed last night when his motorcycle collided with an automobile driven by George W. Benfer of the Karcher hotel, Waukegan, at Belvidere street and Glen Rock avenue, Waukegan.

ASK EXTENSION OF FULLERTON AVE. CAR LINE

A mass meeting of northwest side residents will be held in Ells park field house at 2 p. m. tomorrow to demand extension of the Fullerton avenue street car line from 5600 west to about 6400 west.

Complaint is made that transportation facilities are far from adequate in that section, that residents must walk several blocks in some cases and half a mile in others, for east and west bound cars. The nearest east and west line is in Diversey avenue, one complaint states, which is half a mile north of Fullerton avenue.

Among those who will speak at the massmeeting are State Representative Ray O'Keefe, City Controller M. S. Symczak, Ald. George W. Robinson, Walter J. Orlikowski, Thomas Keane, and James Moreland, Frank Kalteaux, Oscar C. Johnson, Frank Riley, and J. F. Gubbins.

HOPE TO SETTLE CIVIL LITIGATION OF FACTOR TODAY

Attorneys for Factor and attorneys for the British investors who brought suit to break the $2,000,000 trust fund established by Factor have agreed on a $1,300,000 settlement. Before the settlement is approved by the court the fee of Attorney John H. S. Lee, representing the investors, must be fixed by the court. Lee is asking 20 per cent of the final settlement.

LAWYERS BLAME STONE COLLAPSE ON FINANCE HEAD

Plead 9 Defendants Were Market Victims.

Seven defense attorneys arose yesterday in the federal court of Judge Charles E. Woodward and blamed the failure of the H. O. Stone and company real estate and investment concern on James G. Alexander, director of finance for the company during its declining days.

The attorneys said that Henry F. Norcott, president of the company, and his eight associates on trial for using the mails to defraud were guiltless of any intent to mulct the investors and were victims of a tight money market and the stock market crash.

So insistent was the reference to Alexander that Assistant United States District Attorney Joseph A. Strucel voiced an objection.

Court Curbs Attorneys.

"This constant slandering and defamation of Alexander should stop," he said. "He has not been indicted and is not a defendant here."

Judge Woodward ordered Attorney Fletcher Dobyns, speaking at the time, to confine himself to a statement of facts and leave the evidence to the testimony of witnesses.

Attorney Dobyns, representing Marshall W. George, secretary of H. O Stone & Co., echoed the other defense attorneys in saying that his client had full faith at all times in the integrity of the company.

Quotes President Hoover.

"He (George) thought the panic would soon be over," Attorney Dobyns said. "Even the President said it would end soon. George knew Alexander as a former employé of the Central Trust company and understood that he had been dismissed. He charged Alexander with selling stocks for less money than he might have obtained. Alexander bludgeoned the board of directors into selling stock as he directed. George fought this condition as long as he could and then resigned. The failure was not caused by the dishonesty of any one in this case."

Attorney Charles F. Rathbun previously had charged that Alexander, as part of a scheme, had put all the H. O. Stone & Co. securities in the hands of a bank. The plan, he said, was for the bank to hold the securities through the depression and then make the millions which the Stone company should have had.

Resume Hearing Monday.

Following the opening arguments, Judge Woodward adjourned court until Monday and dismissed the jury with instructions to disregard newspaper accounts and discussions of the trial. At the Monday session the defense will attack the indictment on the grounds that no offense is charged.

Attorneys will argue that the indictment charges using the mails to defraud without naming the persons who were defrauded. The government will hold that the argument is not timely and should have been made in the form of a motion to quash the indictment, or as a demurrer, and not as an objection to the evidence.

WARNS FARMERS ON CANDIDATES' RELIEF OFFERS

Citing the fact that the farmers of Lexington and Concord were the first to rise up and fight "the tyrant taxation," in 1775, Arthur W. Cutten, Chicago grain operator, issued a statement yesterday appealing to farmers to be wary of farm relief schemes being offered by political candidates.

"The ballot is the only lawful weapon," Mr. Cutten declared, "which farmers may use to exterminate those who have made such a mess of their livelihood and birthright to earn an honest living." In his statement, Mr. Cutten challenged recent expressions of Vice President Curtis and Secretary of Agriculture Hyde on farm aid.

"The public has looked upon the farm board and its affiliates as the noble experiment in coöperative marketing, yet it has squandered the largest stake ever devoted to a lost cause and after three years has become the instrument which forced cereal prices to the lowest in four hundred years," Mr. Cutten declared.

Calling attention to Secretary Hyde's statement that government agencies had loaned $1,205,332,124 to farmers in the last three years, he said these very loans "spell their own doom and disaster to the farmer, a debt around his neck more deadly than the hangman's noose."

INDICTED FOR EMBEZZLEMENT.

La Grange, Ind., Sept. 23.—[Special.]—The grand jury has indicted Monroe S. Walter, brother of Senator Rollo N. Walter, secretary-treasurer of the defunct La Grange County Trust company, for collecting a promissory note given by Roy Lowinski and keeping the money. Rollo Walter and his father were recently indicted for embezzlement.

ATTORNEY CITED FOR CONTEMPT IN FIXER'S ESCAPE

Reveal Goldberg Never Went to Jail.

Attorney William Moran, who maneuvered Herman J. Goldberg, the tax fixer, out of jail yesterday, was ordered to appear this morning before Judge John J. Sullivan and explain why he should not be held in contempt of court. The contempt citation was drawn up after Judge Sullivan had conferred with Assistant State's Attorney Homer Dodge, who had been trying to put Goldberg in a cell for fifteen months.

Sentenced in June, 1931, to serve three months for fixing taxes, Goldberg appeared last Tuesday before Judge James J. Kelly and sought a writ of habeas corpus. Judge Kelly denounced Goldberg and ordered him behind the bars. Later the same day Attorney Moran appeared before Judge Sullivan and asked a one day stay of mittimus for his client. No mention was made of the previous hearing, Judge Sullivan said, and the request was granted.

Judge Erases Order.

The next morning Judge Sullivan learned the facts in the case and erased the order. Since then detectives have been searching for Goldberg to lock him up.

It was learned yesterday that Goldberg did not even go to jail during the few hours he was in custody on Tuesday. An obliging bailiff, it was learned, had entertained the tax fixer until his attorney brought about the release.

Sheriff William D. Meyering will be called in, officials said, to explain the actions of his deputy. Court records revealed that Goldberg has been successful in dodging jail since the sentence was entered by Judge Joseph Sabath. A series of continuances before the trial were followed by delays in getting the sentence into execution. Four continuances by Judge Sabath and three more by Judge Fisher brought the case to Feb. 16, 1932, without Goldberg in jail. Two more continuances by Judge Philip L. Sullivan, three more by Judge Sabath, and another by Judge Fisher brought the case to the June 6 hearing.

Justice Refuses Hearing.

That efforts in behalf of Goldberg have not ceased was revealed yesterday when Attorney Richard Westbrook appeared before Chief Justice John Prystalski of the Criminal court with some sort of document. He was waved out without a hearing and told his petition would be entertained when he produced his client. State's Attorney's detectives yesterday continued the search for Goldberg without success.

Goldberg, a tax expert, was convicted for reducing tax bills by manipulating county records with the aid of county employés.

Also Objects to Diet of Wheat, Prunes.

New York, Sept. 23.—[Special.]—Life in the Holden family at Pleasantville, N. Y., was just one blessed event after another—nine in all—the first eleven years. And that was all right. But when Mr. Holden took to adopting youngsters in batches of four to round out the family, as it were, and put everybody on a diet of shredded wheat and prunes, well—

Mrs. Stella H. Holden journeyed to White Plains today and formally petitioned the Supreme court there to grant her a legal separation from Jonathan Holden, who, she says, makes $50,000 a year by the practice of law and money lending.

The saga of the bassinets and prunes as recited by Mrs. Holden's counsel, Francis M. Fallon of White Plains, dated back to June 22, 1910, when the Holdens were married.

Family Grows Rapidly.

The family grew rapidly the first eleven years—once there were twins—until the ninth child died upon birth. That, Mrs. Holden recited, sent her husband down to Brooklyn looking for babies. He came back with four who were incorporated into the family, she said, and the promise of adopting from twelve to twenty more.

"He told me I could like it or lump it," she said, "and we had a squabble."

The outcome of that was that the adopted branch of the family, including Mr. Holden, moved into one wing of the big house at Pleasantville. Then the matter of the prunes and shredded wheat arose.

Food Lacks Variety.

Mr. Holden, the wife said, went in for shredded wheat and prunes in a big way and wanted the family to give up meat and go on the same diet. After that he moved away from Pleasantville to Pine Plains, taking three of the adopted children with him. What became of the fourth was not made clear.

However, Mrs. Holden goes on to say that when she requested some support for her brood Mr. Holden, from the fastnesses of Pine Plains, sent her cartons of shredded wheat and cases of prunes.

Mr. Holden contends he gave his wife $250 weekly for the support of the family and that once she cut his face and opened his arteries. But the wife says that is not so and counters by making a point of Mr. Holden's thrift.

He owns seven houses, the wife declares.

WINNIE LIGHTNER ACCUSES HUSBAND OF INFIDELITY IN SUIT

New York, Sept. 23.—(AP)—Winnie Lightner has come forward with more charges against her husband, George Holtrey, whom she is seeking to divorce.

The stage and screen comedienne said in papers filed in the Supreme court yesterday that her broker husband misconducted himself with two other women in addition to one she named in her original divorce complaint. In all she accuses him of infidelity on eight occasions.

EX-HOUSEKEEPER FOUND GUILTY OF THEFT OF $18,000

Mrs. Sophie Paul, 56 years old, was found guilty by a jury yesterday of larceny of $18,000 from her former employer, Harry Wirsing, one time wealthy real estate dealer of Evanston. A motion for a new trial, made by Defense Attorney W. W. O'Brien, was continued until Oct. 7 by Judge Michael Feinberg, who heard the case.

Mrs. Paul, who lives at 4227 North Hermitage avenue, faces a sentence of one to ten years in the penitentiary. Wirsing charged that the defendant took $60,000 worth of securities, jewelry, and cash from a box in the Columbus Safe Deposit vault, 31 North Dearborn street. Court attachés said the jury considered the present market value of securities in fixing the amount of the larceny. Wirsing testified that he had trusted Mrs. Paul, his former housekeeper, with most of his business affairs since 1928.

Prosecutors Thomas Johnson and Charles Mueller asked that the bond of $3,000 be raised to $5,000 after the jury verdict. Attorney O'Brien protested that Mrs. Paul had posted a second bond of $3,000 on another charge, and said that the total of $6,000 would insure her appearance. Judge Feinberg, however, ordered the bond increased.

GIRL'S ASSAILANT HELD ON CHARGE OF RAPE ATTEMPT

Harry Weinheimer, 28 years old, 7320 Clarence avenue, an insurance investigator, was held to the grand jury yesterday in bond of $25,000 by Police Magistrate Harry H. Porter of Evanston on a charge of assault with intent to commit rape. Miss Debora Costello, 23 years old, 1242 Columbia avenue, testified that she went to a roadhouse in Tessville with Weinheimer on Aug. 24. When she resisted his advances on the way home Weinheimer beat her so severely that she was forced to go to the Garfield Park hospital for three weeks, Miss Costello said.

Mrs. Howell Howard, Ill in Dayton, O., Improving

Dayton, O., Sept. 23.—[Special.]—The condition of Mrs. Howell Howard, wife of a prominent Dayton paper manufacturer, and daughter of Mrs. Edward Hines, widow of the Chicago lumber man, was reported somewhat improved today. Mrs. Howard is in the Good Samaritan hospital with pneumonia. Two specialists from Chicago are in attendance and Mrs. Hines, her mother, is at her bedside.

TAKE BROTHERS SCHWARTZ; H-M-M, SUCH ENEMIES!

William and Emanuel Schwartz of Waukegan are brothers. They live under the same roof at 906 North Sheridan road with their father, a wealthy retired furniture dealer.

But the brothers Schwartz outside the home are at variance. Each is a real estate dealer and insurance agent and their rivalry is keen. They are far from friendly.

Yesterday William filed a suit in the Lake county Circuit court for $200,000 damages against Emanuel, charging him with malicious efforts to bring his credit into disrepute. As related in the petition, William last March owed Emanuel $15,000. On the due date it was related, the money was tendered in the form of a cashier's check, but Emanuel was not present to receive it. A little later, it was further stated, Brother Emanuel went to court and got a judgment. This occurred, according to William, after his brother had made threats "to get him."

MEN WHO HELD GIRL IN FLAT GET 30 DAYS

Four men were sentenced to 30 days in the house of correction yesterday by Judge Edward Scheffler for contributing to the delinquency of Anna Houston, 17 years old, 4036 Wilcox street. They are Frank Miller, 42 years old, 1050 West Monroe street; Thomas Karner, 29, of 1943 Warren avenue; William Conroy, 36, and Frank Randall, 32, both of 1021 West Monroe street. They are charged with taking the girl to Miller's apartment, where she stayed for several days. Judge Scheffler said that he did not make the punishment more severe because the girl told the defendants that she was 21 years old.

High School Boys Play with Pistol; One Killed

Herbert Schiller, 3120 Natoma avenue, a high school student, was playing with a pistol last evening in a woodshed behind his home when the weapon was accidentally discharged. A bullet struck David Douglas Ure, 15 years old, 3029 Oleander avenue, a playmate, and killed him. Both boys were students at the Wilbur Wright High school.

POLITICAL BARGES ON POLITICAL WATERWAYS.

The Inland Waterways corporation, which is the United States government in the barge business, made a profit of $8,787 last year, according to an accounting submitted by Maj. Gen. T. Q. Ashburn, chairman of the corporation. Gen. Ashburn appeared recently before the Shannon committee investigating the activities of the government in business. On cross-examination he admitted that the profit reported took no account of the interest on 15 million dollars which the federal treasury had subscribed to the corporation!

If the money is costing the government only 3 per cent, or $450,000 a year, an honest accounting would show a deficit of more than $441,000 without considering a sinking fund for repayment.

Gen. Ashburn was asked how long he thought the experiment in government freight handling should be continued. He said—and this is the most significant part of the testimony—that the line has already proved its profitability on certain sections of the Mississippi river. If congress were not continually requiring the corporation to extend service to routes which are uneconomical, a demonstration would have been given of the utility of the inland waterways which might well attract private capital.

As it is, the existence of the government barge line encourages pork barrel congressmen to appropriate for the canalization of rivers which will never carry more than a few tons of freight a year. Congressmen know as well as any one that it will never pay to invest money in boats to operate on such rivers, but, with the government operating a barge service, the waste can be somewhat concealed. The barges will appear from time to time on the waterway to fool the taxpayers into thinking they are getting something from their congressman, though in fact the loss would be less if the rivers carried nothing.

The barge lines, like the waterways themselves, have been used by pork politicians as vote getters. Thus, a barge has been lent to the Len Small campaign. The boat is towed from landing to landing for use as a dance hall. The lame duck congressman from Peoria, William E. Hull, finally sent a check for $200 to pay for rent of the boat—but only after much publicity and protest. Obviously if government property is available on such terms, the barge line cannot be profitable. And the barge line is going to serve political interests as long as congressmen have control of appropriations.

The remedy is clear. The government ought to sell the property of the Inland Waterways corporation at the earliest moment for the best price which it will fetch. Believers in the inland waterways, no less than their opponents, should demand the sale of the property, for as long as the government is in the barge business the barge business will be mismanaged.

PHILIPPINE INDEPENDENCE.

The most conspicuous aspect of Philippine politics in recent years, and especially months, is the moderation or qualification of the demand for independence. The economic considerations involved in release from American ties have increasingly cooled the ardor of the nationalist leadership, and while the fundamental desire for eventual complete independence naturally remains with most of the people, most of the politicians and intellectuals, the present anxiety is not lest independence be denied but that it be granted too soon. Philip Kinsley's vivid yet judicious reports give an interesting summary of present opinion in the islands, and we note especially his quotation from the head of the school of commerce, University of the Philippines, Dr. Benitez. "The relations of this country with America," wrote Dr. Benitez in the Philippine Magazine, "have brought us nothing but happiness and prosperity, with ever increasing administrative independence—the only independence which can possibly benefit us. Commercial independence would mean an Asiatic poverty for us and absolute political independence from the United States would mean our subjugation by Japan."

This is a candor to which Philippine leaders have not been inclined, but we wonder if recent events in the far east have not set others among them besides Dr. Benitez to face more seriously the full implications of absolute independence. Even Mr. Vincente Villamin, who has been emphasizing the interdependence of political and economic freedom, holds to the policy of eventual independence after a sufficient period of economic preparation and readjustment. But whatever considerations of expediency in argument may restrain Philippine publicists or politicians from declaring openly for a permanent status in the American political system, the alternative, America or Japan, must at this time seem to them worth serious consideration. Manchukuo ought to have a special significance at Manila. The Philippines are a stride from Formosa, the Carolines flank them to the east. The letter addressed "Manila, Japan," and forwarded from Tokio with the sardonic indorsement, "Not yet," may seem not wholly a joke.

POLICE DRIVES AND AFTER.

Tuesday's bomb atrocity has naturally stirred the authorities to violent activity, for which the community will be thankful. We read that the bombing squad of the detective bureau has been enlarged. The state's attorney's office is in high. There is to be a grand jury investigation. We are to have a "drive" on bombing.

But bombing has been going on for months. It has become a recognized method of business and labor conflict. It has not, until Tuesday, destroyed life, but it was certain to do so sooner or later. It has been a disgrace to the city, a persistent threat to life and property, and its persistence has been a discredit to the police and the prosecuting authorities.

As THE TRIBUNE has said repeatedly, it can be abolished by efficient detective work and unflinching prosecution backed by the courts. That the community has had to wait until a cruel tragedy occurred is something to think about. No sensational "drive" should have been necessary against a notorious and persistent evil. The practice of bombing should be one of the easiest to run down and destroy, and what the community needs is not occasional "drives" compelled by atrocities but persistent, faithful, thorough, and competent police operation. The discovery and punishment by special effort of the brutes responsible for Tuesday's atrocity will not satisfy an intelligent citizenship. Its results will be good for a time, but for a time only. What the community needs is day in and day out police protection.

THE EDUCATION OF A WOMAN AGED 49.

"C. F. Dunn, a Latin teacher, was found in a classroom registering his fifty pupils . . . 'I have just registered a 49 year old woman who is taking second year Latin just for the fun of it, not even asking for credit' . . ."—Excerpt from an article in The Tribune of Sept. 20 describing the opening of the public night schools.

"The general assembly shall provide a thorough and efficient system of free schools whereby all children of this state may receive a good common school education."—Excerpt from the constitution of the state of Illinois.

The 49 year old woman who wants to take Latin has our admiration and respect. No doubt she will be the happier for her effort. No doubt her mind will be enriched. It is too bad that she has had to wait this long for the course and pleasant to think that at last her desire is to be fulfilled.

But the question remains whether her instruction should be paid for by the taxpayers of this community. The constitution is clear on what the public schools are intended to do. Instruction in Latin may come within the meaning of "a good common school education," but by no extension of the meaning of words can a woman of 49 be regarded as one of the children of this state. Even Methuselah was not a child at 49.

Free education of children is a charge upon the taxpayers of this state because, in our theory, democratic government requires an electorate possessing a certain minimum equipment for citizenship. The lady of 49 may be presumed to have that minimum. If she hasn't, it is difficult to believe that anything she gets at her time of life in the Latin class will raise what might be called her citizenship quotient. The taxpayers owe her nothing, but she is taking their money to increase her own enjoyment of life. It would be no more absurd to employ the taxpayers' money to send her to the movies.

Under ordinary circumstances, the misuse of the taxpayers' money might be overlooked as of small consequence. But this year it cannot be overlooked. The teachers' salaries are months in arrears. The children, who are the special charge of the state, are being overcrowded in classrooms. High school attendance, in particular, is overtaxing the capacity of the schools. The inability of tens of thousands of taxpayers to meet their bills has been demonstrated beyond all question. Under these circumstances, to divert money from the education of children is wrong, and to add any avoidable expense to the school board's budget is an aggravation of the wrong.

The school board's counsel have said that the board may not charge tuition at the Crane college or the Normal college. Presumably the same principle applies to the night schools for adults. That is unfortunate because the night schools are performing a useful function which ought to be continued if possible. No doubt the great majority of the night school students would be willing to pay a moderate fee for what they get. The possibilities of charging a fee ought to be explored to the limit because it is difficult to see on what other basis this type of instruction can be continued. When there is not enough money at hand to educate the children the board cannot justify the diversion of a thin dime for the education of adults.

Editorial of the Day

[Grand Rapids Herald].

Grand Rapids' board of moving picture censors should be complimented for having indorsed the film, "Tom Brown of Culver," as shown in a local theater last week. If the picture were just morally clean we shouldn't feel that any thanks were owed the censors. They are supposed to indorse clean pictures. But here was something else, a movie calculated to bring down the criticism of those strangely inspired Americans who don't believe in patriotism, military training or respect for the flag. "Tom Brown of Culver" fairly overflowed with the kind of patriotism that is taught at a properly supervised military academy. The chief characters in the picture were taught discipline in the course of military training. In the opinion of those addlepated internationalists who see the soldier only as an automaton, his firearms only as weapons of murder and the flag only an emblem of imperialistic ambition, "Tom Brown of Culver" is just the kind of a picture that no American boy or girl should be permitted to see. But, whatever else may be said for our Grand Rapids censors, they apparently believe in patriotism; and we join them. Posterity would be greatly served if this picture were shown in every classroom of every school in the land. Nor would that, however, be sufficient. The fine, clean lads who salute the flag and the gold star in "Tom Brown" have a message for elders as well.

WE HARVEST OUR STRAW VOTE CROP.

The Democratic national headquarters down in New York, after figuring up fifty-four straw votes, announces that Mr. Roosevelt will beat Mr. Hoover by a majority of 9,643,712. That sounds convincing, especially when you spell it out, nine million six hundred and forty-three thousand seven hundred and twelve. Especially the twelve. They don't say that Roosevelt's majority will be about nine millions. That would sound a trifle vague and uncertain. Nor do they say somewhere around nine million and a half. It would still sound a trifle doubtful. But they say nine million six hundred and forty-three thousand—AND TWELVE. That AND TWELVE ought to convince almost anybody. But it doesn't us, because we counted up our own straw vote yesterday and it proves conclusively that Norman Thomas will be triumphantly and unanimously elected. He will have a majority of 2 over both Mr. Hoover and Mr. Roosevelt. In our straw vote we were the only one that voted and the result showed Norman Thomas 1, Mr. Hoover, 0; Roosevelt, 0. Assuming that Norman Thomas will vote for himself, although the intelligentsia seldom leave home on election day, we have as the result of our straw vote: Norman Thomas, 2; Hoover, 0; Roosevelt, 0. Which triumphantly elects our peerless leader by a majority of 2. And our straw vote is just as good as any other straw vote.

IN READINESS.

I miss you most when there are long green twilights,
Star-tattered things whose thin skies drift above
The outdoor room where we have gone to listen
To violins and songs of gypsy love.
I choose the table underneath the foliage . . .
The one we liked whose tablecloth was blue . . .
I ask for candles, gayly, freshly lighted,
Then I pretend I'm waiting there for you.

That presently the darkening street will echo
To your firm tread, and I'll look up to see
Broad shoulders coming through a tangled archway,
And smile at you as you smile down at me.
I do not know what fate has sent you questing
For taller hills than those I dared to climb—
I only know I keep the candles shining
For you, my dear—you might come back some time!

If she did start any shinnanigans I never knowed it. What gets my goat in this neck of the woods is tha terrible high prices, fer instance think of paying $3.20 fer 26 oz. of 14 yr. old stuff when you can get 16 oz. in Chgo fer only $6.00 and its brand new. Seems there just aint no justice. Hooray. The custom officials have taken quite an interest in us, every time we meet they ask us where we was born and fer fear we haven't got enough winter underwear they ask us to open up our baggage. They must think I'm smuggling in a cupple of Chinamen. Tha sight seeing goes both ways fer tha price of one, tha Canucks get a laff outen us and vice versus, only we gotta buy tha gas and oil. The 1st day we landed I thought they was sleepers up here cause I get a 10 spot changed and tha guy hands me back 11 Canadian bucks, I steppt on tha gas and faded away quick fer fear he'd find his mistake an when we gets to tha hotel I just am itchin to tell some one an when I see a bird driving up with a Illinois license I tells him and he says ya durn fool you was entitled to 12 bucks. Them Canucks skinned yuh. But what cared I. Even if he had give me tha right change I wouldn't have kept that extra dollar very long.

P. S.—They'd got it right back over at the government beer store.

AN OFFICIAL down in Washington turns down an appropriation for a five thousand dollar auto the government was going to give him. Five thousand from the four billion dollars a year that they cost us down there. That makes only three billion nine hundred and ninety-nine million and nine hundred and ninety-five thousand dollars for us taxpayers to dig up. Pretty soft, pretty soft.

TUBERCULOSIS PREVENTION.

IN a review of the progress of control of disease in children, written early in the year 1932, and covering the advances of the last five years or thereabouts, Dr. I. N. Kugelmass rather definitely advocates vaccination of children against tuberculosis. This procedure is gaining ground steadily in Europe and in South America, though Great Britain, Germany, and the United States are disposed to hold back.

New York is the only city in the United States where this kind of vaccination has been given much of a trial, and even that city has not gone further than try it on a few hundred well observed cases. In France, and in those parts of Europe, Asia, Africa, Canada, and South America where French influence is strong, hundreds of thousands of babies and almost as many domestic animals are yearly vaccinated against tuberculosis.

Those who have had most experience with it pronounce the method safe and effective. They say that babies vaccinated against consumption can be left in bad homes with no great fear that they will develop the disease. They advocate having adults whose work exposes them unduly to consumption get vaccinated before taking up their work. This has been tried as a measure for the protection of nurses and doctors working in consumption hospitals. So far as I know, no one has tried it as a protective measure for ax grinders, metal polishers, and granite cutters.

European dairy cattle are so heavily infected with tuberculosis that the state is too poor to undertake eradication by the methods that are succeeding in America. Some of the European countries, and especially France, think this vaccination is the only way out that is practicable for them. They report that it has worked in the several hundred thousand cases where they have tried it. If they are on the right track, within a few years there should be a general decline in the tuberculosis rate of cattle, especially in France.

Meanwhile, in this country, there is an increase of tuberculin testing of school children. In some communities the school and health authorities have tested practically every school child with tuberculin. They know the percentage of reactors, and how many give no evidence of having been infected. They know which children are in need of special care to protect them against consumption. Those parents whose children have reacted have been put on their guard. It is recognized that adolescents, and particularly adolescent girls, are the weak part of the consumption battle line. For some reason the consumption rate among young women is holding up stubbornly. This program of tuberculin testing school children is intended to head toward a better policy for preventing consumption in young men and women.

Dr. Kugelmass considers that experience is pointing toward vaccination of children as the next step in this battle.

MAY HAVE OTHER CAUSES.

J. M. D. writes: My face gets very red at times and I seem dizzy every day. Is this a sign of high blood pressure?

REPLY.

It is, but it is far from being a reliable one. Both red face and dizziness may have other causes and high blood pressure may be present without causing either.

ROLLING MAY HELP.

B. K. H. writes: I am 35 years old and the mother of two boys, 4 and 5 years old. I weigh 125 pounds, am 4 feet 11 inches tall, and half my weight seems to be in my thighs. What is the cause of those heavy thighs? Can this be taken care of? In what way?

REPLY.

Rolling will do part of the job. There are machines to squeeze and massage certain unduly fat parts of the body. Fat seeks quiet places. If it is pushed around much it picks up and wanders away to a new location. Reducing weight will do another part of the job. However, whatever you do you will always be broad of beam, since probably that was in your builder's plans and specifications.

PERSPIRATION.

E. C. S. writes: 1. Is it harmful to stop perspiration in the arm pits?

2. I have been told that the use of remedies to stop perspiration causes cancer. Is this true?

REPLY.

1. No. Occasionally a mild eruption results, particularly if the medicine has been "sopped on" freely.

2. No.

WARTS.

I. McB. writes: I got rid of a large crop of warts I had on both hands by applying a milky substance from the thick roots of dandelion weeds. I broke off a piece of this thick root and dabbed each wart with the broken piece every day and they disappeared like magic. Another kid told me about this.

REPLY.

Warts are important in the lives of kids and when one kid knows how to cure them he should tell others. Tom Sawyer told Huck Finn and all the other kids. I am sure your remedy is better than Tom's, though his also cured.

SAFETY DRIVE.

Chicago, Sept. 18.—[Friend of the People.]—One class of drivers that absolutely run through more stop lights in a day than all the automobiles in the town are the motormen on the street cars, who make a practice of starting when the light begins to change from green to red. Fair play for all and arrest for all running through a red light, regardless of whether it is an automobile or a street car, should be the rule.

R. J. P.

This matter was referred to the superintendent of transportation of the Surface Lines, who replies that during the week ending Sept. 15 a total of 186 intersections were checked by street car company inspectors and during the time a total of 5,204 car movements were observed of which 17 were considered as violations. He further informs that he suspended each of these violators for one day.

A MISDEMEANOR.

Chicago, Sept. 18.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—Is the use of a star, such as a World's Fair star adjacent to the license plate, legal on an automobile in Chicago? A. L.

Sec. 250a of the motor vehicle law is in part as follows: "Any owner of a motor vehicle other than members and officers of the general assembly, elected officers of the state and officers having the power of conservators of the peace, who attaches or permits to be attached to his motor vehicle any badge or star or emblem having the appearance of a star is guilty of a misdemeanor."

SPECIAL ASSESSMENTS.

Chicago, Sept. 11.—[Legal Friend of the People].—I noticed several items in THE TRIBUNE regarding people having their property sold for nonpayment of special assessment tax, the existence of which they were unaware of. 1. Is not the city required to send a notice by registered mail before such action is taken? 2. How can the ordinary citizen under our intricate system of taxation know whether there is any special assessment against his property? The general property tax blank form usually shows any special assessments, if any are due. I have always paid my taxes promptly and so far as I know there is nothing on the books, but I know of several people whose property has been sold who claim that they received no notice that there were any special assessments against it. 3. I am of the opinion the city could be sued in such cases and wouldn't have a leg to stand on.

E. A. C.

1. Sending such notice has been the common procedure, but it is not required by statute.

2. By inquiring for his tax bills from the county collector.

3. You are mistaken.

16 YEARS AGO TODAY

SEPTEMBER 24, 1916.

CHICAGO.—Representatives of 600 bakeries of Chicago and vicinity met behind closed doors and voted to raise the price of bread to 6 cents a standard loaf. The new price is to become effective tomorrow. The action was announced by B. H. Dahlheimer, president of the Chicago Master Bakers' association.

ASBURY PARK, N. J.—From his porch at Shadow Lawn, President Wilson declared the eight-hour railroad law had been enacted, not because the railroad men demanded it, but because it was right. Answering Republican Candidate Hughes' claim that "the facts" should have been ascertained before the bill became law, the President asserted that no facts could be ascertained until the law had been put into operation and its workings observed by the commission he is to appoint.

LONDON.—One Zeppelin was destroyed and another is reported to have met the same fate during a raid on London and eastern counties last night. Observers on the roofs and bridges of the city were treated to quite a pyrotechnic display of shrapnel bursting around a Zeppelin visible somewhere in the remote outskirts of the city. No reports of casualties have been received.

PARIS.—French aviators took part in fifty-six air battles yesterday, bringing down ten enemy flyers, it was officially announced.

BERLIN.—An official statement says: "In aerial fighting north of the Somme we shot down eleven enemy machines."

ROME.—On the Carso plateau, over which the Italians are attempting to advance in the direction of Triest, a heavy attack was made by the Austrians and they penetrated Italian trenches. However, they were subsequently driven out, the war office announced. On his trip to the Italian front American Ambassador Thomas N. Page had two narrow escapes from Austrian shell fire. Mr. Page's party visited the lower Isonzo and witnessed the Austrian bombardment of Goritza.

LONDON.—British troops on the Somme front in France are continuing their progress. The official statement says that further advance was made east of Courcelette, where a strongly fortified system of enemy trenches was captured and the British line was advanced on a front of a half mile.

LONDON.—The tide has turned in favor of the allies in the great battle of Dobrudja. Once more the Rumanian and Russian troops are on the offensive and are driving Field Marshal von Mackensen's army of Germans and Bulgars toward the Bulgarian border.

PETROGRAD.—German troops in the region of Lake Narocz on the northern end of the Russian line launched a gas attack lasting two hours and in the intervals between the gas waves dense columns of Teuton troops advanced against the Russian positions. The attacking forces were driven back each time. In the region of Darevo and La Buzy, southeast of Baranovichi, the German troops also liberated gas.

BERLIN.—Strong Russian attacks against the German positions near Korynitza, in Volhynia, were without success, the German official statement says. Fighting activity in the Carpathians is said to be slackening.

CHICAGO.—Dr. E. Wyllys Andrews is the new chief of staff and surgeon in chief in Mercy hospital, succeeding Dr. John B. Murphy. Dr. Frederic A. Besley, who it was first announced had been given the position, came in as one of the "attending surgeons."

CHICAGO.—"Muckles" Shields, swinging free from the mahogany rail in Eriewein's labor hangout at 169 West Lake street, flipped his revolver and sent a bullet into James Mooney, a union agent. Mooney, with the bones of his lower left leg shattered, told Capt. Morgan Collins of Central station not to bother about an investigation. He said that the man who shot him "will settle with me."

WHEAT.

Quincy, Ill., Sept. 20.—Say, did any of you guys ever live on a farm? Did you ever see one, and would you recognize one if you saw it? Surely not, or you would have used the space you used for your editorial, "A Year's Living for a Month's Work," to tell how many TRIBUNES you sold last month, or razz the dry law. If you think a wheat crop is a lazy man's job, try getting out and shocking about a hundred and fifty acres some July afternoon when the thermometer is about 118 degrees; then get in on threshing. If North Dakota isn't the place to raise wheat, where is? Or should we follow farm board advice and not raise any? That isn't human nature, or economic soundness.

Some of you Chicago yaps that do so much squawking about relief have it pretty nice when you don't pay any taxes. The North Dakota wheat farmers have a just cause. A FARMER.

THE FARMERS' PLIGHT.

Chicago, Sept. 20.—I get thoroughly disgusted every time I pick up a paper to see nothing but farmer—farmer—farmer—their hard times and extreme poverty. This is just so much vote getting bunk.

I was born and reared in a farming district, and it is not nearly as tragic as the public is led to believe. A farmer has his three square meals a day, no matter how low prices go. They banked plenty during our years of prosperity. The average farmer spent lavishly, most of them owning one and two pleasure cars, sending sons and daughters to college the same as their city brothers. Now they have lost when prices fell and banks closed, but so have city people. Eight million of us walking the streets, not eating regularly, clothed in rags. The farmer eats regularly and he needs to sell little to clothe himself. He has a place to sleep. How many homeless farmers are there? How many homeless city men?

There has been so much talk by political candidates of the farmers' poverty that they—the farmers—believe it themselves now.

My parents are farmers. I know what I'm talking about. E. C. J.

NO.

Chicago, Sept. 19.—Last Monday morning I set out early seeking employment [having been out of work for practically eight months]. I boarded a Lawrence avenue street car, going east, alighting at Clark street. At the corner a tagger approached me for a contribution. I had 3 cents in my hand [the change received from 10 cents from the street car conductor, and as it has always been my pleasure in life to help whenever possible, I deposited these 3 cents in the coin receiver and, to my surprise, the tagger looked at me and said, "For that little amount I won't give you a tag."

Imagine my embarrassment having her say such a thing after showing my faith and good intention in giving what I did [not what I really could afford, for I cannot afford to give a cent away], and especially when 15 or 20 people were standing on the corner waiting for traffic lights and surface cars. Several of them turned around with surprised eyes and I walked away without my tag, 3 cents poorer and chock full of embarrassment. Does this encourage "giving," I ask you?

BRIDGE PROBABILITIES.

Chicago, Sept. 20.—Possibly not only the writer of "An Amazing Bridge Deal" but also other TRIBUNE readers may be interested in the answers to his questions. He gives a striking deal and asks, "What peculiar law of probability was invoked by that deal? We think it much more singular than thirteen of a suit."

As a matter of fact, no peculiar law is invoked in this or any other hand. All are governed by the same law. No particular deal is any more or less probable or singular than any other particular hand. The probability of my being dealt thirteen particular cards, whether they be all of one suit or not, is 1 in 635,013,559,600. This latter number is the number of combinations of 52 things taken 13 at a time, and is calculated by dividing the product of 52, 51, 50, . . ., 40 by the product of 13, 12, 11, . . ., 1. The probability of a particular deal, such as the one submitted by your contributor, or such as thirteen of a suit to each of the four players, is 1 in 53,644,539,629,827,953,566,437,440,000.

This last number is read: 53 octillion, 644 septillion, 539 sextillion, 629 quintillion, 827 quadrillion, 953 trillion, 566 billion, 437 million, 440 thousand.

WHERE TO SAVE.

Oshkosh, Wis., Sept. 4.—I believe THE TRIBUNE is doing good work in showing up our government extravagance. I for one believe the air mail is a pretty expensive thing and dangerous, to the detriment of railway mail service. We are being taught too much speed where it's not necessary. No wonder there's a postal deficit.

Then again, if Uncle Sam is building these big airships, Los Angeles and the others, why go to so much expense there? No need of them as I see it. They are potential death traps.

W. H. ENGLEBRIGHT.

WALKING TO SCHOOL.

Winnetka, Ill., Sept. 20.—Now I would like to state a case of what I call injustice to the students of the Deerfield Shields school in Highland Park, Ill. I wonder why it is that this school furnishes railroad tickets to its students from out of town? These students from out of town get off the train at the Briargate station. The school bus picks them up. This is a wonderful service, but why is it that the students of this school who live at the Briargate station and surrounding territory have to walk to school, a distance of 1 3-10 miles? The driver of the bus states that students have to live 2 miles from school in order that the school bus will pick them up. W. J. WRIGHT.

CREDIT FOR THE ICEMEN.

Chicago, Sept. 21.—Let us give credit where the credit is due. The police did not catch the robber who beat Mrs. Kuchenbecker. Two local icemen did. They chased and caught him one and a half blocks from the scene of the crime and brought him back and held him until the police arrived, which was some five or so minutes later. The above is not hearsay, but actual facts, as the undersigned heard the screams, saw the flight and the return of the icemen with the robber between them. L. K.

THE SNAKE AND THE SPIDER.

Chicago, Sept. 15.—May I inform you that the picture you printed showing the snake enmeshed by spider webs is most revolting? Any one with humane inclinations is made wretched and unhappy at this presentation of a living creature in torment. Every woman of my acquaintance is indignant and distraught.

U. S. AND 4 OTHER NATIONS DEMAND PEACE IN CHACO

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Sept. 23.—What was interpreted as a new move by the Hoover administration to add moral sanctions to the Kellogg anti-war treaty and other peace pacts came today when the commission of five neutral American nations announced a new plan for selecting the aggressor in the Gran Chaco boundary war between Bolivia and Paraguay.

The neutrals, including the United States, Uruguay, Colombia, Cuba, and Mexico, proposed that Bolivia and Paraguay agree to an unconditional termination of hostilities and a settlement of their differences through arbitration without reservations. In notes to the two warring governments the five powers asked that they agree also to allow the neutral commission to send a delegation into the fighting zone to verify the effective termination of hostilities and to report back if either power violated the agreement.

Would Withdraw Recognition.

The commission of neutrals would then declare that the country violating the agreement was the aggressor. It would suggest that all the governments of America withdraw their diplomatic and consular representatives from that country. The effect of this move would be to apply moral sanctions against the power branded as the aggressor. Under the Kellogg pact no machinery exists for determining the aggressor nation.

State department officials declined today to discuss the question of whether this new plan for determining the aggressor might be proposed for international use. In such an event it would put the United States in the position of adding sanctions to the Kellogg anti-war treaty. At the time of its adoption the Coolidge administration declined to agree to any insertion of teeth in the Kellogg pact because the task of selecting the aggressor nation was considered virtually an impossible one.

Paraguay Sets Conditions.

ASUNCION, Paraguay, Sept. 23.—(AP)—A foreign office statement today said Paraguay insists upon the views it has already expressed in connection with an immediate cessation of hostilities in the Gran Chaco.

The government earlier this week informed the American neutrals that it believed withdrawal and demobilization of troops was a more effective method for settlement than a suspension of hostilities. The government claimed that lack of communications and natural difficulties of the ground in the Chaco region would hinder suspension orders being carried out and would make supervision by neutral forces difficult.

An army communique said 72 Bolivians were slain and part of the Bolivian trenches captured at Fort Boqueron, which has been beseiged by Paraguayans for nearly two weeks.

RETURN OF TWO EX-CHIEFS FROM EXILE STIRS CHILE

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

SANTIAGO, Chile, Sept. 23.—The capital is pondering the prospect that four of the five men who have ruled Chile within a year soon again will be within the city. Two of them will return from exile.

Dictator Carlos Ibanez fled after the student revolt of last September. He is returning by plane tomorrow from Mendoza, Argentina. The government today issued permission to Juan Esteban Montero to return. Montero succeeded Ibanez and held control until the Socialist revolt of June 4, when he took refuge at Mendoza. Col. Marmaduke Grove, who tried to turn the government Red by edging out Carlos Davila, will not be permitted to return. After Davila foiled Grove's plot Grove was exiled to Pascua island. Davila, who was forced to yield to the air force revolt two weeks ago, is still in Santiago.

Rumors are that Ibanez and Montera both will try to regain power despite the announcement of Gen. Bartolme Blanche, the provisional president, that only the candidate winning the election on Oct. 30 will succeed him. The government today ordered investigations in Santiago province as to the existence of civilian militarized groups planning control of the elections. The investigation was started by rumors that the groups were secretly preparing support civilian candidates.

WOMAN LEADS BRAZIL TROOPS AGAINST REBELS

RIO DE JANEIRO, Sept. 23.—(AP)—A woman, identified only as "Santa Dica," was reported in federal dispatches from the northern front to be leading federal volunteers against the Sao Paulo rebels. A dispatch from Uberaba, in western Minas Geraes, said the woman warrior entered action at Igacava at the head of a detachment.

The government claimed the capture of two prominent politicians attempting to instigate pro-Paulist uprisings. Arthur Bernardes, former president of Brazil and leader of a recent abortive uprising in Minas Geraes, was reported captured today in a forest cabin near Vicosa, where he had been deserted by his followers. Dr. Borges de Madeiros, prominent Sao Paulo leader, was captured in battle yesterday.

Dr. Bernardes was president of Brazil from 1922 to 1926. It was in his administration that Brazil withdrew from the league of nations because the nation had not been accorded a permanent seat on the league council. Dr. Bernardes also has served as governor of Minas Geraes.

HONOLULU, Sept. 23.—(AP)—Imputations of foul play were thrust aside today by a coroner's jury, which rendered a verdict that Mrs. Marion Shainwald Sevier, wife of Col. Granville Sevier, United States army, had died of natural causes on Aug. 27, 1928. The verdict closed a case begun at the insistence of Ralph Shainwald, who asserted his sister was poisoned. The jury said further efforts for a second autopsy would be useless.

TROOPS ROUT MINE PICKETS WITH TEAR GAS

Taylorville, Ill., Sept. 23.—[Special.]—Two hundred National Guardsmen today tossed tear gas bombs at crowds of striking miners who had gathered at Langleyville, a few miles from here, in an attempt to prevent workers belonging to the regular union from resuming operations in the Peabody Coal company mines.

Awed by this determined show of force, the strikers and women who accompanied them broke their ranks and the soldiers with fixed bayonets cleared the streets. The military protected their faces with gas masks as they went about their work.

Soldiers Restore Order.

Digging began in the No. 9 mine at 8 a. m. and the workers quit at 4:30. It was said the would-be picketers, many of whom came from other towns, had been awed by the demonstration of the morning and that no trouble was feared so long as the soldiers remained on the job. A total of 247 men went to work at the agreed scale of $5 a day. The Progressive Miners of America, organized in opposition to the United Mine Workers of America, are striving to halt all digging until the old rate of $6.10 a day is restored.

The task of clearing the streets of Langleyville was given to a detachment commanded by Capt. Howard Bentley of Springfield. When they arrived on the scene at daybreak, fully 300 strikers were waiting in the center of town.

Marching toward them, the soldiers were greeted by boos and epithets. Capt. Bentley several times gave the order to disperse, but the crowd was obdurate, standing firm and daring women fled.

The bombs were thrown at the feet of the crowd leaders and as the ill smelling fumes rose the men and women fled.

Later a brief search of the town was made and all outsiders ordered to depart. This order was sullenly obeyed. Having expelled the out of town picketers, the guard officers established posts at each road leading into Langleyville, with orders to prevent the entry of strikers. Supplies of tear gas were given them and machine guns were set up to aid in the overawing of the strikers.

Ohio Mine Guard Shot.

Athens, O., Sept. 23.—[Special.]—Floyd Hagedorn, a guard at mine No. 267 of the Ohio Collieries company, which is operating under an agreement not satisfactory to local mine unions, was shot and seriously wounded by a sniper today. The snipers were fired on by other guards, who are armed with machine guns.

U. S. ACCEPTS LEAGUE PLAN TO REVIVE LIBERIA

BY EDMOND TAYLOR.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

GENEVA, Sept. 23.—The United States today capitulated to the league of nations on the rehabilitation of Liberia and accepted the league's plan, which authorizes the league to open negotiations with the two American firms which dominate the finances of the Negro republic—the Firestone Tire and Rubber company and the National City Bank of New York.

One of the objects of the negotiations to be instituted by the league is to bring more money into the Liberian republic's coffers by obliging the Firestone company to increase the rental it pays for the rubber plantation from 6 to 52 cents an acre. The other is to persuade the National City bank to lend more money to the Liberian government or else to permit outside agencies to make the loan, which is forbidden at present by a special contract.

Responsibility Up to U. S.

In league circles American acceptance of the league's plan is interpreted as meaning that the state department has assumed the moral responsibility of coercing the two American companies into shelling out the amounts that the league believes they really ought to pay Liberia.

The American counter proposal, which was introduced yesterday, was abandoned without a struggle. Samuel Reber, representing the United States, announced that his government now is prepared to accept the league plan. He suggested that the American counter proposal contained some useful suggestions which should be embodied in the league committee's report.

The committee adjourned until Monday for drafting the formal text and Washington has until then to reject the compromise.

(The republic of Liberia had its origin in the efforts of several American philanthropic societies to make permanent provision for freed American slaves by establishing them in a colony on the West African coast. In 1822 a settlement was formed and on July 26, 1847, the republic was formed. Its constitution is patterned after that of the United States.)

SCIENTIST FINDS AXIS OF EARTH IS RIGID, NOT FLUID

[Copyright: 1932: By the New York Times.]

TOKIO, Sept. 23.—That the earth's axis is not fluid, as has been assumed, but a rigid body two and a half times harder than steel is the thesis which Dr. Akitsune Imamura of the Tokio Imperial university, noted physicist and seismologist, will advance in a paper to be read at the annual meeting of the Imperial academy on Oct. 12.

The discovery is the outcome of the first observations ever scientifically recorded of the horizontal waves of a long distance earthquake passing through the earth. The horizontal waves of the earthquake of June 27, 1929, near the Sandwich islands, in latitude 54 south, longitude 30 west, were reported in Tokio 21 minutes after the official time of the quake.

While seismologists have hypothetically calculated the time necessary for these waves to pass through the earth, the seismograph has not previously recorded them, and seismologists have explained the omission by the theory that the earth's axis, being a fluid, intercepted their transmission. Dr. Imamura's observations show the Sandwich island waves passed clear through the earth to Japan, which he says proves the axis is not fluid.

WISCONSIN "U" AS A POLITICAL TOOL DEPLORED

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Madison, Wis., Sept. 23.—[Special.]—Glen Frank, president of the University of Wisconsin, expressed the hope today that as the election in Wisconsin becomes history citizens no longer will regard the institution as a political tool, but rather an educational unit.

In an address of welcome to about 3,000 students, a third of them freshmen, Mr. Frank leveled his shots at political organizations generally, criticizing them for bringing the university into the campaign.

The university is not for the purpose of developing radicals or making students' minds conform to present social and political standards, but is an institution in which students should be taught to think for themselves in school as well as after they are graduated, he said.

"May I express the hope that, as the smoke of battle recedes into the distance, politicians and the press alike may settle down to the realization that the University of Wisconsin is an educational institution, and not a training station or tool for partisans of any limited breed," Mr. Frank said.

This was taken to mean that issues of the Daily Cardinal, student publication, which carried political news and cartoons of the day of the regular Republican state convention June 7, are not a portion of the university's routine of school activities.

"The university is dedicated to development and discipline of the free mind of the first class man," Mr. Frank asserted, "the major marks of which are:

"The free mind of the first class man knows no loyalty that should take precedence over loyalty to the truth which it seeks to see clearly and without bias in the dry light of facts.

"The free mind resists enslavement to passion, to prejudice, and to partisanship; brings to the bar of disinterested judgment the pleas of all parties and all powers, and ceaselessly searches out the motives that coin the catchwords of all classes and all cliques.

Motives of Sincerity.

"It turns a deaf ear alike to democracy when it grows sentimental and to plutocracy when it grows selfish.

"It is independent alike of tirading minorities and of tyrannical majorities if it happens that the truth abides in neither.

"When it is entrusted with power, it never is guilty of saying the thing that will take rather than the things that are true.

"The free mind of the first class man serves the crowd without flattering it and believes in it without bowing to its idolatries.

"It is obvious that the free mind of the first class man rarely will be popular with partisans. It could feather its nest more easily if it were more easily taken into camp.

Raps Blind Partisans.

"Your university hopes that your years on her campus will give you increasing immunity to the oversimplified war cries of blind partisans—whether they be partisans of the left, the right or the middle of the road—and that, as acolytes at the altar of truth, you have here developed a devotion to her austere demands that never will slacken when you become adult participants in the life of state and nation.

"This is your university's ideal and hope for you, the only ideal worthy of a great university."

Window Breaker Fined and Sentenced to Jail

Charged with breaking a store window while on probation for a similar offense, Ernest Zawitouski, 24 years old, was sentenced to four months in the house of correction and fined $50 and costs yesterday by Municipal Judge Samuel H. Trude. The defendant was convicted on evidence presented by the Secret Six which has been making an investigation of the recent wave of window breakings which have been attributed to the attempts of racketeers to intimidate merchants.

'Asks 18 Months in Jail to Escape His "In-Laws"

"Please send me to jail for 18 months. My in-laws are driving me crazy," pleaded John Jurasek, 24 years old, to Municipal Judge Edward S. Scheffler yesterday when he was arraigned for nonsupport of his wife and child. The judge accommodated Jurasek, sentencing him to 30 days in the house of correction and promising him that if he still wanted 18 months at the end of the sentence, the matter would be arranged.

BY FANNY BUTCHER.

"Sons," by Pearl S. Buck. [John Day.] To be published next Monday.

WITH ill concealed impatience the public has been waiting for "Sons," the sequel to Pearl Buck's powerful and tender tale of a Chinese peasant, "The Good Earth." Not only did "The Good Earth" receive a prize last year as the most important novel written during the year by an American but it won the even more coveted prize of the affection and respect of the entire English reading public.

PEARL S. BUCK.

Starting modestly as merely one of the two or three thousand novels published during the year, it won immediate critical praise and little by little it became a good and then a best seller. No novel of the year, nor, so far as that goes, of many years, was more consistent in its continued growth of popularity than "The Good Earth." Its fundamental rootedness in the great reality of the earth, the nourisher of man in life and his pillow in death, its richness in human realities, was something that even those who run [carelessly through pages] must read and thrill to.

Somehow life seemed richer to readers of "The Good Earth." Perhaps it was in contrast to the barenness of Wang Lung's life, perhaps it was because any assurance that there are realities, that there are verities in life is enriching to such orchid-like beings as city dwellers who are doomed never to touch their mother earth, and feel themselves, Anteus-like, sevenfold strengthened by that contact. Perhaps because to those who have a daily contact with the good earth and have lost the salt of that contact it gave back its savor.

There is no question about the fact that some books have an aura of inspiration about them. They have a fundamental rightness. Most often those books are less conscious works of art than something which is somehow exactly right in its conception and its execution. It isn't a quality that can be defined. And yet it is apparent to the least learned of readers as well as to the most skilled critic. Fewer books than one would guess from the ballyhooing that goes on about modern literature have that quality. "The Good Earth" did have it. The public is agog to know whether "Sons" has it.

"Sons" is the story of the sons of Wang Lung. Wang the Eldest became a fat, self-indulgent rich man who clothed his sons in silk, who sold his acres to provide himself with silver to scatter among the dancing girls.

Wang the Second became Wang the Merchant, who could never let silver run through his fingers without less running out than ran in, who raised his sons to wear coarse clothes and live meagerly, and who contented himself with one wife who worshiped silver as he worshiped it.

Wang the Third became Wang the Tiger, a war lord of the north, who had to hear from his own son's lips that he was nothing but a robber chief, after he had dreamed of being a king.

Mrs. Buck pictures the lives of each of those sons and of their wives and concubines and of their children, and of the poor fool who was Wang Lung's daughter and of the hunchback who was Wang the Eldest's son and the mild, gentle Pear Blossom, Wang Lung's child wife, who tended those two broken blossoms and loved them, just as she pictured the lives of Wang Lung and that dumb, patient, epic soul, his first wife, in "The Good Earth."

Every detail of their strange (to us) lives is set down with the same meticulousness of detail and the same vividness of color and line that made "The Good Earth" ethnologically as well as humanly interesting.

"Sons" is written in the same Biblical style that so perfectly suited "The Good Earth" because it was, in very fact, an epic in its own right.

"Sons" is an excellent piece of work, wholly after the fashion of "The Good Earth." It has everything that "The Good Earth" had in the way of tangible literary qualities. It is, in its own right, as memorable a picture of a country and a civilization remote from our own as was "The Good Earth." In every apparent way it is as good as "The Good Earth." But it does lack just that indefinable something that puts a book above all classes and all standards, that something which for lack of a better word we call "inspiration."

Chase Pleads for Inflation to Remedy Ills

"A New Deal," by Stuart Chase. [Macmillan.]

STUART CHASE, the author of "Men and Machines" and "Mexico: A Study of Two Americas," has turned his attention in "A New Deal" to problems that now face America and the world, the necessity for an examination of the economic system and situation.

But the author does not jump into the problems immediately. He first gives a historical and critical survey of America's economic past. The first chapter is even more fundamental than this. It is entitled "What Is an Economic System For?" and explains the whys and wherefores of any economic system and gives a definition.

The next chapter deals with the rise and fall of free competition, the laissez-faire system which the author considers to have failed miserably. The economic results of the war are discussed at length, and the chapter entitled, sarcastically, "The Roaring Twenties" presents the author's reasons for the crash of 1929. After a vivid and scathing analysis of the economic conditions resulting from what he considers the almost criminally extravagant bull market, Stuart Chase concludes his chapter: "Throughout the roaring twenties, productive capacity gained and distribution lagged, in spite of sales campaigns and installment credit. The gulf grew wider. Do we need any more basic reason for the great depression of 1930? Can we ask for any more complete demonstration of the necessity of concentrating all the intelligence we possess on the problem of distribution?" Stuart Chase then, in the following chapter called "Tailspin" (for obvious reasons), traces the tragic collapse of 1929.

The book, "A New Deal," destroys all myths about the witch doctors and surgeons (as he calls them) of economics and about their prophesies. This book is not only destructively critical. Stuart Chase offers his remedy. He believes that America is not moving toward actual revolution, but that she is definitely moving toward collectivism. For the immediate remedy he suggests a drastic inflation. Most readers will be stimulated by "A New Deal," whether or not they agree with the theories put forth. The style is for the most part vigorous and honest, though it tends now and again toward slanginess.

New Macaulay Uses Novel to Tell of History

Long Studies Give Exact Picture of Time.

BY FRANK SWINNERTON.

LONDON. — [Special Correspondence.]—Miss Rose Macaulay has turned to the historical novel. It will be by no means the ordinary historical novel, for Miss Macaulay is by no means an ordinary writer. It will aim at being a picture, scrupulously exact, of a period in the seventeenth century, and it is the result, not of a lighthearted adoption of a few theatrical costumes and tags such as "Sblood" and "Swounds," but of sincere and loving study.

ROSE MACAULAY.

Several indications have shown that our intellectuals are taking notice of the historical novel, from F. L. Lucas' "Cecile" [not wholly a success but much praised, and in its way ambitious] to Miss Margaret Irwin's "Royal Flush" [a Book society choice, widely read in England and very highly praised]; and the addition to this series of a book by Miss Macaulay is significant. The novel is entitled "They Were Defeated." It is said to contain no word that was not in use at the period described. It will thus appeal to purists.

I hope it will also appeal to the general public, for historical novels that are free from "tushery" may well revolutionize our notions of the past. Anybody who reads history that is more than highly colored and very superficial romanticizing of Merry Monarchs Tudor and Stuart knows that the life of the English people in the past ages can be absorbingly interesting.

If that interestingness can be made more universal the historical novelist of the future may be a benefactor. Macaulay versus Macaulay. I wish the later Macaulay [Miss Rose] would give the world a truer portrait of the infamous Judge Jeffreys than her old namesake did; but I believe her book deals with a period earlier than his.

A clever young journalist, Miss Stella Gibbons, has written a skit upon the solemn agricultural novel, so familiar to us all, in which all the characters

'LET THERE BE BEER,' IS RESULT OF THREE YEARS OF RESEARCH

"Let There Be Beer," by Bob Brown [Harrison Smith], bears this recommendation from H. L. Mencken: "I hope every honest beer fancier will buy two copies of 'Let There Be Beer,' one for himself and one for his pastor." The author has spent three years in Germany and other great beer drinking localities, investigating, collecting material, sampling various types of brews, carrying on elaborate research until now, in this book, is assembled a regular dictionary of beer drinking. The book is lively and has some of the vigor of a glass of good beer. For wets and drys alike "Let There Be Beer" should be both stimulating and interesting.

Author Declares English Greatness Is Social Blindness

Dr. Robert Briffault, author of "Breakdown" [Brentanos], prophesies the complete breakdown of western civilization in this book. He says England is already crumbling and that her greatness has now become mere social blindness and stupidity.

He adds, "Mentally, intellectually the collapse of England is more complete than the economic and political dissolution of her empire. Her thought no longer counts. English literature, the English press, English thought are now redolent with the aroma of the grave. English intelligence is silent, reduced to impotence by the sense of futility that oppresses it. The public press does not belong to the modern world, is scarcely aware of it. Meanwhile her modern literature, art and music are those of a world which is destitute of convictions, taking refuge in the dissolution of cynicism and anarchy."

Daily Beauty Hints by Antoinette Donnelly

Assist at Debut Party Today

Miss Frances Bell and Miss Jane Boyce are among the debutantes assisting at the debut tea this afternoon of Miss Elizabeth Baum. Miss Bell is the daughter of the Laird Bells of Winnetka and she made her debut on Sept. 10. Miss Boyce is the daughter of Mrs. Livingston Fairbank of 999 Lake Shore drive and Paris, and she will make her debut later in the season after her mother arrives from abroad. She is visiting her grandmother, Mrs. William D. Boyce in Ottawa, Ill., until Mrs. Fairbank comes to Chicago. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

Imported Petit Point Now in Reach of All

Intriguing Trinkets Placed on Display.

BY RHEA SEEGER.

DUE to some mysterious mix-up in international politics lots of the best importations have been reduced in price, giving thrilled shoppers the chance of a lifetime to buy hitherto unattainable treasures.

Take for example costume accessories or trifles fashioned of petit point. Only a collector, enthusiastic on the fascinating subject of petit point, can explain the lure of this lovely stuff. Once an owner of a bit of petit point, the rest of your shopping existence is squandered in search of other pieces equally desirable.

A new supply of some intriguing feminine trinkets of petit point is now being displayed in a smart Chicago shop. Handbags in dainty feminine shapes and sizes, made of petit point, are priced incredibly low for such authentic treasures. You will find floral patterns as well as landscapes peopled with shepherdesses and French court beauties and their trailing cavaliers.

The colors are almost indescribable, millions of the tiniest stitches ever taken have been multiplied and used in fragile, muted shades of faded old blues, soft rose tints and lovely greens and browns, all on small squares and fitted with exquisite skill into ravishing handbags.

Lovely Tuscan gold clasps, some set with jewels, are ideally feminine contrast for such miniature masterpieces. And all this beauty and old world charm are now within the reach of the most slender allowance.

Other typical 1932 gadgets are also available of petit, many times exactly the same wee little designs and colors of the larger pieces of the handbag. Lipstick lighters, so small that it seems impossible that anything so diminutive could be so practical, will find their way into the smartest handbags. These tiny tubes look just like a very small edition of a lipstick and so they are named . . . they are covered with bands of petit point and they will not only serve you faithfully and daintily through the trials of getting a light, but they are decoratively practical in the ensemble . . . yes, a petit point ensemble for your bag is now the fashionable thing to own!

You can buy a billfold that is the last word in beauty and femininity, a billfold covered in petit point and backed with four moire silk folds for bills. There is also a compact of either yellow, prussian blue, or patrician purple enamel contrasted with a covered top of petit point. The third member of this trio, a lighter of larger capacity than the lipstick edition described above, also covered in petit point embroidery.

All these trinkets can be separated from the matching handbag and used with equal effectiveness with dress-parade bags of fine suede and antelope.

If you are a collector of petit point patterns, the thing to do is to dash down immediately and indulge your whims while this superlatively lovely and authentic stuff is within the grasp of appreciative buyers.

Engagement

Miss Catherine Crane of Boston, whose engagement to Cornelius M. Trowbridge Jr. of Lake Forest is being announced this morning.

Society to Spend Another Busy Day Rushing to Important Social Affairs; Two Debuts on Program.

BY JUDITH CASS.

ANOTHER of those hectic Saturdays which keep all of society rushing. But if the weather is nice no one objects to having such a busy day occasionally when keeping so busy means going from one delightful affair to another.

But before we start in on the long list of today's social activities we are going to announce one of the important engagements of the season, that of Miss Catherine Foster Crane of Boston to Cornelius M. Trowbridge Jr. of Lake Forest.

Miss Crane sent us the announcement early in the week, with the request that we not announce it until this morning, the same time that it is being announced in Boston, where Mr. Trowbridge is visiting his fiancée.

Miss Crane, who is the daughter of Joshua Crane, is a graduate of the Winsor school in Boston and of the Bouvé-Boston School of Physical Education. She made her debut in Boston in the season of 1926-'27 and is a member of the Junior league.

Mr. Trowbridge attended the Hotchkiss school and was graduated from Yale in 1923. No date for the wedding has been set. Mr. Trowbridge is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Cornelius M. Trowbridge.

Two to Make Debuts Today.

Today's debutantes—every Saturday at this time of year there are one or more—are Miss Elizabeth Baum and Miss Dorothy Bard. Miss Baum is making her debut at a tea given by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. James E. Baum, at their Lake Forest residence from 4 to 7 o'clock. Assisting will be a large group of "debs," including Miss Frances Bell, Miss Jane Boyce, Miss Lucy Fairbank, Miss Marjorie Goodman, Miss Rosamond Baker, Miss Elizabeth Bunting, Miss Nancy Traylor, Miss Barbara Eldridge, Miss Mary Senior, Miss Mary Reed, Miss Jean Schweppe, Miss Lydia Swift, Miss Marie Swift, and Miss Laura Thorne. Tonight Miss Baum will go to Mrs. Walter S. Brewster's dinner dance for Miss Mary Reed and Miss Jean Schweppe.

Miss Bard will be introduced at a tea to be given by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Francis N. Bard, at their residence, 459 Eagandale road, Highland Park, from 4 to 7, the popular hours for an afternoon reception. Weather permitting, tea will be served in the garden, but the receiving party will be indoors. Assisting will be Miss Marion Bard, the debutante's sister; Miss Janet Bard, her cousin; the Misses Caroline and Barbara Bullard, the Misses Mary and Diana Mayor, Miss Margaret Smith, Miss Madeline Bliss, Miss Honore White, Miss Martha Lee, Miss Mary Louise Morris, Miss Eleanor Pace, and Miss Ellen Truax. Miss Bard is returning shortly to Connecticut college for her last year there.

Janet Kirk Bride Today.

An important autumn wedding is taking place in Winnetka this afternoon—that of Miss Janet Virginia Kirk, daughter of Mrs. Willing Dunning Kirk of Glencoe, and Robert Hampton Ripley, son of Mrs. Robert H. Ripley of Winnetka. The service is to be read at 4 o'clock in Christ church by the rector, the Rev. Ashley E. Gerhard, assisted by the Rev. Douglas Cornell, in the presence of the relatives and a few friends, after which there will be a large reception at the Indian Hill club.

Van Gorder Kirk will give his sister in marriage and she will be attended by Miss Anne Small as maid of honor and by Mrs. Van Gorder Kirk and Mrs. Frank Allen Baker Jr., the bridegroom's sister, of Morristown, N. J., as bridesmaids.

Wilder Ripley will act as his brother's best man, and ushering will be Frank Osborne, Robert Biggert, Edward Hamm Jr., Thomas Eddy, Cameron Eddy, Frank A. Baker Jr., and T. Roswell Coyne.

Miss Kirk made her debut in 1929, having attended Miss Risser's school in Rome the year before. Before she went to Italy she went to Rosemary Hall at Greenwich. Mr. Ripley is a graduate of the Hill school and of Knox university. He and his bride-to-be have not decided where they will reside.

Brewsters to Give Dance.

Mr. and Mrs. Brewster's dinner dance tonight at their Lake Forest residence for two of the most popular "debs" of the season, Miss Schweppe and Miss Reed, is to be quite small, and, unlike most of the parties that are given for debutantes, the invitation list was not limited to debutantes. In fact, there are to be only a few among the twelve young ladies who will be there.

Like most successful dancing parties, however, there will be almost twice as many men as girls, which insures a good time for all, for as a rule men do not like to dance every dance and girls do, and so if there are extra men every one is happy.

Among the guests will be Miss Polly Perry and her fiancé, Harold M. Kneedler, who have decided to be married at St. Chrysostom's church at 5 o'clock on Saturday afternoon, Oct. 22. The place for the reception is not decided yet, but it will be either at home, 1525 Astor street, or at the Casino. Neither have Miss Perry nor Mr. Kneedler heard from any of the out of town young people they have invited to be in their wedding party, so the only ones whom they are sure of are Miss Patty McCormick and Miss Betty Brown and young Sally Perry. Mrs. Brewster is planning a party for her niece and Mr. Kneedler some time before the wedding, and so are lots of other relatives and friends, but no dates are definite yet. Miss Perry is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. I. Newton Perry.

Glasers to Entertain 40

Mr. and Mrs. Morris R. Glaser have invited about forty friends to a buffet supper tonight at Oakescroft, their residence in Glencoe. The party is to be in the refreshment and recreation room in the basement for which Lord Hastings has just completed murals and Lord and Lady Hastings are to be among the guests. The young English couple, who have been staying with the Glasers for several weeks, are to be here another fortnight before going to New York, where Lord Hastings will execute some commissions before sailing for London.

Miss Elinor Durbin and S. Prentice Porter, who are to be married next Tuesday, and about fifty-eight of their friends will dine and dance tonight at the Shore Acres club as the guests of Mr. Porter's mother, Mrs. Henry H. Porter, who is here from her home in Manchester, Vt., for the wedding.

Married

Longmeadow Hunt to Meet Today.

The Longmeadow Hunt of Winnetka will hold its opening afternoon meet today, leaving the kennels at Happ and Hibbard roads at 2:30 o'clock. For the remainder of the season the Hounds will meet on Monday mornings at 8:30 o'clock and on Wednesday and Saturday afternoons at 2:30 o'clock. Strangers or visitors are permitted to hunt by invitation and arrangements for hunting privileges may be made through the hunt secretary, Donald F. McPherson. This afternoon after the hunt Mr. and Mrs. McPherson are to entertain the riders at tea at their residence, 644 Pine lane, Winnetka.

The Chicago Lying-in hospital is to benefit from a mixed doubles tennis tournament to be held today and tomorrow on the courts of Mrs. William B. Hale's residence at 900 Willow street, Winnetka, and Mrs. William G. Hibbard's residence next door. Mrs. Hale will serve tea this afternoon after the matches.

The Onwentsia polo team, headed by Charles F. Glore, and the Fort Sheridan one, captained by Maj. C. C. Smith, are to play a match tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock on the Fort Sheridan polo field.

Harvest Home Dances Tonight.

Two north shore country clubs that are having their harvest home dinner dances tonight are the Knollwood and the Exmoor clubs. At the former there will be a special table reserved for horse back riders and their guests. There are reservations for more than six hundred at the Highland Park club, which will not close its clubhouse until the end of October, although this is the last party of the season. Exmoor keeps the cottage open all winter.

The Lake Geneva Country club also is having its harvest home party tonight.

The marriage of Miss Marjorie Louise Frank, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles G. Frank of 2624 Lake View avenue, to Henry Hanna Brigham of Glencoe will take place this afternoon at 3:30 o'clock central standard time at the Big Foot Country club at Lake Geneva where the Franks have their summer residence. Mrs. James Delos Swan Jr. of Highland Park, the bridegroom's sister, will be the matron of honor, and Miss Carolyn Erminger of Chicago will be the maid of honor. The bridesmaids will be Miss Mary Bell of Lake Geneva and Harvard, Ill., and Miss Mary Randolph Matteson of Chicago.

Erwin R. Brigham will serve his brother as best man and ushering will be Robert G. Ferris of Harvard, Nathan B. Hunt of Harvard and Pasadena, Francis W. Holbrook of Glencoe, W. Donald Forsyth of Mount Vernon, Ill., Frederick A. Schnell of Chicago, and Ernst C. Schmidt of Lake Geneva and Chicago.

It was with real grief that this newspaper writer heard of the death yesterday afternoon of Mrs. William H. Scriven, for she was one of the sweetest and most capable women in society and all who knew her loved and admired her. None who knew, however, how she had suffered during the last few years from the incurable ailment which she had, can help but be glad that she is beyond that suffering now. She leaves to her daughters, Mrs. John J. Finley [Jane Scriven] and Miss Betty Scriven, a heritage of great courage, great simplicity, and a very great heart and soul, which must be a comfort to them now.

The Stylish New Necklines Call for Slim Throat

Get Rid of That Extra Chin, Says Antoinette.

BY ANTOINETTE DONNELLY.

Those very high necklines with a promised wide fall and winter vogue are going to call for a lot of stretchings and turnings. They're not going to be any too becoming to the short necked women. They're going to be still harder on the lady with the double chin, or wattled throat. Her best line will be a lower neckline, until she has her extra chin removed and the stringy flesh tightened with exercise, astringent and better head carriage.

It's too bad we do not have to reach for our food like a giraffe, just to give necks more daily stretching. The wonder is more of them don't collapse into flabby, scrawny or pouchy looking things with so little done to keep them muscularly firm. If you keep your head up smartly, you're doing something awfully good for that neckline of yours. If you don't do this, or if you are putting on chins, you'd better treat that neck of yours to several good exercises to help restore the columnar firmness of it.

You probably know the head dropping exercise—but do you know that when you drop the head forward you must do it slowly and bring it back slowly until it rests on the back of the neck? Tense the neck muscles throughout this exercise. This is what does you the real good. You can continue doing this for twenty counts forward and back.

Then, bend the head as far to the right as you can without help from the opposite shoulder. Bend until the ear comes as near as possible to touching the shoulder. Then bend to the left. Do this alternately twenty times.

Finally, lie flat on the floor, face down, hands at sides. Lift the head and chest and legs from the floor, bowing the body, leaving only the ribs and abdomen resting on the floor. Bring the head back as far as you can.

These three exercises done regularly for six weeks or two months will do a powerful lot toward improving neck and throat.

Patience Sees Parents Over Hard Places

BY GLADYS HUNTINGTON BEVANS.

"Every year in childhood has its phases," a grandmother said to me the other day. "Some of them are incomprehensible—and some seem to respond to nothing. Often the only thing we can do is to have patience." And she went on:

"They say that adolescence is hard on children. But," she continued with a smile, "adolescence is hard on parents, too. From 13 until they are 18, these forces of which they are not aware are working on them. Sometimes the trouble is because psysically they are maturing when emotionally they aren't. Or it may be that emotionally they are developing when mentally they are still children. It is hard on them, but O," and she sighed reminiscently, "it's hard on parents, too."

"And what did you do during those hard years?" I asked of the older generation.

"Nothing much in the hardest times except have patience—endless patience. I have seen a boy of 15, 6 feet tall, cry at some little thing, when up to that time he had never been the crying kind. I have seen boys with angelic dispositions suddenly begin to get 'edgy' and cranky. And one grandson who was unusually well handled by my most understanding daughter started in suddenly to complain that he 'was always being picked on.'

"One of my boys frankly said to me once, 'I don't know what's the matter with me. I feel cranky and irritable and mean and you say things to me that I ought not to mind, and it just gets me mad. I don't know what's the matter with me.'

"And there isn't much that parents can do except have endless patience, try to avoid supervision of little things as much as possible, and overlook as much as one can. I remember that my oldest boy, when he got into his teens and began to get difficult, used to resent my casual remark, 'It's time to wash for dinner.' So I changed it. 'Dinner'll be ready in five minutes,' I'd say and sometimes he'd wash his hands and sometimes he wouldn't.

"But the feeling that I wasn't watching him to see if he did, and didn't 'pick on him' if he didn't seemed to erase that resistance to the idea that I was ordering him to wash for dinner. I felt after my boys passed through adolescence that I had developed a tact, forbearance, and understanding that made the job of an ambassador to a foreign power seem like a simple and quite easy job."

So patience, patience, patience is the one quality we can bring to this problem, even if we cannot bring understanding. Patience—the word that is often the magic wand that helps to transform the cranky, irritable adolescent boy into the normal, poised young man.

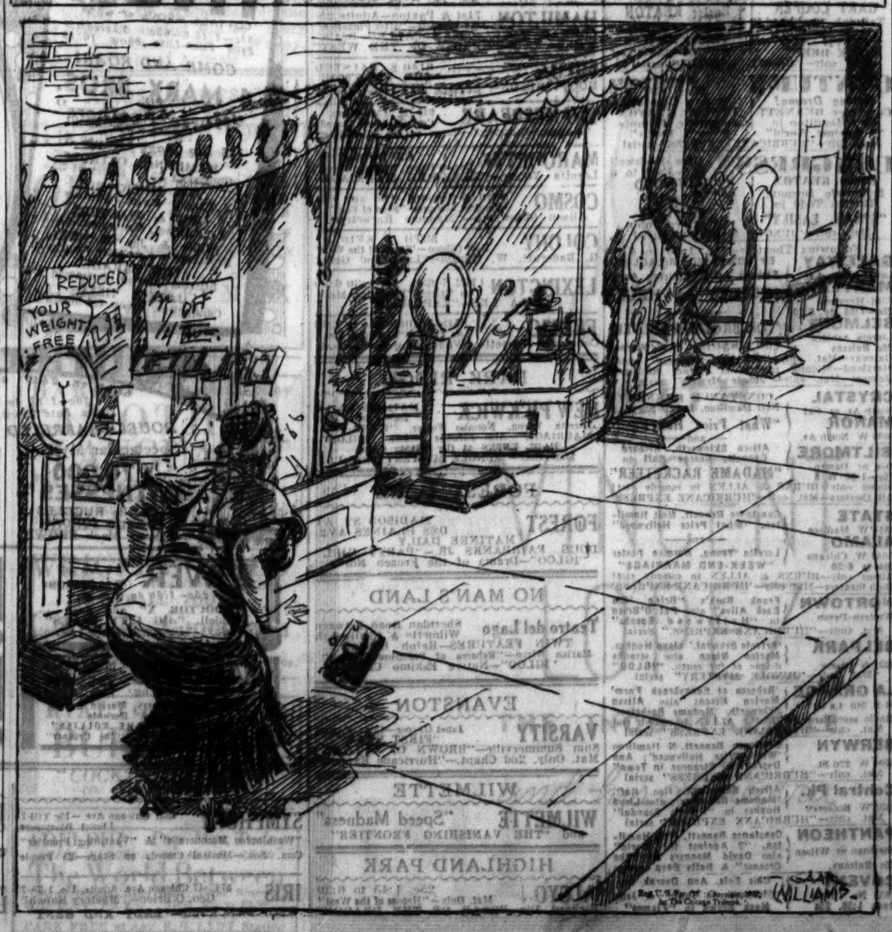
SOMETHING OUGHT TO BE DONE ABOUT THIS



The Murder of Caroline Bundy

By ALICE CAMPBELL.

SYNOPSIS.

Neil Starkey, American biographer, is engaged by Caroline Bundy to compile the life and letters of her late father, a famous English biologist. Neil is mystified by the peculiarities of Miss Bundy, who is broken in health and mentally disturbed. She has hired a photographer, named Tilbury, as bailiff, who with his wife, a common, illiterate couple, occupy the lodge, and hold a strange influence over Caroline. Neil meets Natasha Andreyev, Caroline's half Russian niece, beautiful, but fiery tempered, who is Caroline's secretary. He moves to the Bundy estate in Somerset and Caroline puts him in charge of the library in the daytime, cautioning him to admit no one. She tells him her father, a man of science, was also a mystic. Caroline and the Tilburys hold nightly meetings in the library. Neil has a friend, Giles Gisborne, who is vicar of a nearby parish and lives with his sister, Rachel. Neil has lunch in Bath with Rachel and Tasha. He sees Tasha hold a secret meeting with a strange man and later sees her pay the stranger's bill in the tearoom. Neil is attracted to Tasha, but is baffled by her odd behavior. Caroline has a fainting spell and when she recovers insists on seeing Tilbury.

INSTALLMENT XII.

AN ALLIGATOR BAG.

"Some one has put my aunt against me lately, and it lies between Emily Braselton and—the Tilburys."

"Good Lord, they'd never dare——"

"O, wouldn't they? That's all you know about it. Listen!" Natasha came closer and whispered with suppressed bitterness. "Old Peters got the sack this afternoon—after twenty-five years' service here. A good man, too. I refuse to believe anything against him. That's why he came here tonight, to try and make her see reason. I had a few words with him while the doctor was upstairs, and it's just as I guessed. It's this slimy bailiff who's been making mischief."

"But what's to be gained by doing that?"

"Gained! Can't you see his game? He's set out determinedly to oust O, he means to make a clean sweep, then he'll have undisputed power. Why, it's perfectly plain what he's up to," now Neil could not see any reason in what she said.

"He may be scheming—but surely an insignificant little snail like that!"

"Insignificant!" she repeated scornfully. "I tell you, the combined influence of those two is terrific, uncanny. I don't pretend to understand how one who's never had it before. But there's some far worse element in it than that. They have got some hold they're working for all it's worth, and what they're aiming at now is to get her entirely at their mercy. Just watch—you'll see I'm right."

"Do you still imagine the clue to it is among your grandfather's papers?"

Recalling his own intuition, dismissed as illogical, he felt there might be truth in her statement, though this was a new view of the situation, though even flattery will turn the head of any except that they flatter her and the old staff. Crabbe won't stand it much longer. Then my turn will come, quite likely she was biased by personal dislike.

"You forget Tilbury is keeping on his job under protest. I myself heard your aunt urging him not to go away."

Her glance withered him. "Can't you see through that dodge? The more reluctant he pretends the more benefits she'll heap on him to keep him here. That tin pot photography business of his was about to go under. He and the woman are a couple of incompetents, with all eyes out for some one to impose on. In the ordinary way Caroline would never employ an unqualified person to run her estate. That's why it's so evident there's something queer."

She had never, till now, let herself go so freely. It was plain she was badly shaken over what had occurred.

"Do you still imagine the clue to it is among your grandfather's papers?" he asked, trying to get at her private opinion.

"That does seem a bit wild, doesn't it? And yet I don't know. . . If there weren't something there, why should she hold on to the keys in this extraordinary way? You've not come across anything peculiar, I suppose?"

Natasha shook with a spasm of loathing.

"Why did she insist on seeing him? O! when I look at him and think how he's poisoned her mind against poor old Peters, a man with a wife and grandchildren dependent on him!"

"Perhaps she'll take him back."

"Not she. You don't know how unforgiving she is at the best of times. Why, if she ever found out these two were doing her in any way, out they'd go in an instant. If only I knew how to show them up! How can I, though, when I'm so utterly ignorant and can't prove anything?" She stood with clenched hands on the spot where so short a time ago his arms had encircled her. It was some seconds before she drew a deep breath and turned to him a face still troubled but apologetic. "You really must forgive me for dragging you into this muddle. I'm rather ashamed at unburdening myself like this. Now I suppose I'd better go and look after Caroline."

She said good night quickly, and left him to smoke another cigaret, and ponder on the evening's events.

Hours later, in bed, he was still turning over her interpretation of the Tilburys' motives, at one moment thinking it plausible and at the next exaggeratedly far fetched.

Gradually all this faded from his thoughts. Once more the music which had brought him and Natasha together pulsed through his brain like a delicious sedative. Half asleep he felt again the wielding body pressed against him, inhaled the faint daffodil fragrance of the hair brushing his cheek.

What was that? He woke with a start. From the study beneath had come a sort of thud, as though a piece of furniture had been overturned on the carpeted floor. He held his breath, but could only hear his heart beats.

Still he was not satisfied. After a brief debate, he slid out of bed and with extreme caution crept down to look into the matter.

Surreptitiously he tried the study door, which was locked. Unbroken silence lay behind it. He waited a minute or two, but nothing happened.

O, well, he was wrong, evidently—though later, when he regained his own quarters, it occurred to him that possibly there was some one inside the room with the door fastened for safety. The point was, who could have got hold of the keys, undoubtedly stowed away beneath their owner's pillows? Only Alfred Tilbury and Natasha—and of these two the latter alone would be able to return them before they were missed.

"She's almost all right. Isn't it strange? Why, I've had a hard job keeping her in bed. Here are your keys, by the way. You are to take them up to her this evening, and ——" with a laugh, "will you stay with the charwoman while she cleans the room? Even Mrs. Bebb's not allowed in there alone. Caroline undertakes to watch her."

This was news. On joining the lean old woman armed with dustpan and broom he decided to question her as to the date when the vigilance commenced.

"Wot, this monkey business, sir?" She cocked an amused eye at him and sniffed contemptuously. "This is a new fad, this is. We began it—let's see—O, 'bout the time you got here. Yes, now I count back, it was the very first morning, three weeks ago."

Then the precautions coincided with his arrival. Why, when he was permitted free access to everything the room contained? But wait! The Tilburys had come at the same time—to be exact, the day before. . . . No, that fact did not help. If any one was in Miss Bundy's confidence, they were, and in any case they spent long hours here every evening. All the servants had been in service for months, in some cases years, before the new conditions arose, and Natasha herself had been entrusted with the keys only a month ago! In short, he was as far from a solution as before.

Later in the day he learned the result of Natasha's conference with the doctor, who apparently was much upset over her disclosure.

"He declares these nightly meetings are responsible for her condition—intense nervous excitement, or perhaps something we don't know about—and that they've got to stop, or he won't answer for the consequences. This attack is only the beginning. There'll be others, if she isn't careful. She may even drop dead."

"How did she take all this?"

"Badly. She's livid with rage, but she's had to give in. She's got to lie up for a week, diet, and see no one for more than a few minutes—so temporarily, at least, I've outwitted those hypocrites!"

"What explanation did she give the doctor?"

"None, really. He tried to worm it out of her, but didn't succeed. I believe she stammered something about a line of research, and that it couldn't possibly hurt her, but that's all. I've been told to watch and keep him posted. He says she doesn't need a nurse."

Soon after this several minute incidents occurred which, at the time, meant little. The first of these concerned the alligator bag, destined to figure largely in coming events.

Fox Abandons Plan to Use 2 Chaplin Boys

BY GEORGE SHAFFER.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Hollywood, Cal., Sept. 23.—In spite of Lita Grey Chaplin's continued legal and personal efforts to have her two children appear in the movies at the Fox studio, the Fox corporation has given up the idea, according to a statement today, and two other children have been engaged for the parts intended for Tommy Chaplin and Charlie Jr. One of the substitute actors is Dickie Moore.

Production will start Monday on the story, tentatively titled "Divided by Two," which Frank Craven wrote especially to feature the Chaplin youngsters. Thelma Todd may get the call to replace Lita, although this isn't definite yet. Dave Butler directs.

Tom MacNamara, who was (and still is) a newspaper cartoonist long before he became a movie writer, hopes that his colleague, Harold Gray, cartoonist creator of "Little Orphan Annie," will be as pleased with Tom's work as Tom is with Gray's, because MacNamara is co-author of the screen story based on the Annie comic strip, which Radio—RKO—is pushing to completion. Wanda Tuchock is MacNamara's co-author.

Mitzi Green, who plays Annie, today did impersonations of the four Marx Brothers and Zazu Pitts as part of her "business" in the screen story. With Mitzi in the cast are a police dog, which the studio prop men had a tough time trying to make look like the shaggy, good natured big mongrel, Sandy, of the comic strip; Buster Phelps, aged 5; May Robson, Matt Moore, Edgar Kennedy, and Kate Lawson.

Question clinic now in session! It's been pleasant to hear from so many of you this week. Questions not answered each week in our Saturday column will be handled via Uncle Sam with all the speed we can muster.

Our first question comes from Mrs. M. J., who has been reading our recent Sunday article on canning.

She asks: "Does this bacteria you speak of [B. botulinus found in many soils and requiring high temperatures to kill] make a difference in the appearance of the food if it is present?"

Yes, often. There is a softening of the food and a production of a foul swelling as if botulinus organisms have not been killed in processing the cans. This is the reason we recommend only pressure cooked processing for nonacid vegetables in which these dangerous organisms thrive most stubbornly. However, sometimes there is little or no odor apparent on opening the can. If the poison is present, heating of the foods, while not destroying the poison, will make this odor apparent and thus warn the cook against tasting or serving the food. For this reason all home canned nonacid vegetables should be brought to a rolling boil before serving. Salad foods may be thoroughly chilled again before using.

Question 2—Miss A. M. F. puts in a request which I believe may find a sympathetic echo in a good many kitchens. She says: "Would you please send me a copy of a good recipe for bread for two people?"

[One Loaf.]

1 cup half and half water and milk.
1 cake compressed yeast.
1 tablespoon shortening.
About 1 quart flour.

Scald the milk and water separately. Combine them and remove one-fourth cup of the liquid. Add the butter, salt and sugar to the remaining hot liquid and let cool until lukewarm. When the reserved one-fourth cup liquid is lukewarm, crumble into it the yeast cake, and when thoroughly dissolved add to the first mixture, also lukewarm. Stir in the flour and mix until the dough is thoroughly blended and clears the sides of the bowl in mixing.

Turn out onto a board and knead until the dough is elastic and small white blisters may be seen on the surface. Let stand, covered [where it is about 80 degrees F.] until double in bulk. Punch down and shape into a loaf. Place in a greased pan. Brush lightly with butter. Cover again and let stand till again double in bulk. Bake until well risen at 375 degrees F.; then turn the heat to 450 degrees F. and let bake till done.

H. S. Graduates Who Pick Science Work Lead U. of C. Tests

High school graduates who choose scientific research as their future vocation rate first in their classes in psychological tests and those who choose journalism rate second, according to a study made public yesterday by Roy W. Bixler, registrar of the University of Chicago.

Mr. Bixler compared the scholastic records of 7,600 boys and girls who were graduated from high schools in the Chicago area last year with their performances in psychological tests and with their choice of vocations in twenty leading fields of work. The tests, used to predict the scholastic aptitude of freshmen, showed the prospective scientists first, journalists second, engineers third, and physicians fourth.

First in the ability to make good grades but fifth in the intelligence tests came those who chose religious work as a vocation.

The rating following the first five mentioned was as follows: Law, library work, teaching, music, art, dentistry, printing, architecture, social service, business, home economics, pharmacy, miscellaneous trades, machine trades and nursing.

Good Morning!

It must be the climate!

Down where the south seas pound the coral reefs and sailors pound their women, melodramatic episodes are as common as seeds in raspberries, if one is to believe one's movies. Certainly the south sea islands are fertile hunting grounds for the writer aflame for plot. They can always be relied on to furnish a picturesque background for a murder.

"The Painted Woman" is like the regular run of south sea island movies as regards general outline; but the scrdid yarn spun manages to be more convincing than the average tale of the kind. It is not too great a strain on the imagination to picture as happening in real life what occurs on the screen.

The heroine, a water front Magdalen who entertains in a dive, is "property" of brutal Capt. Boynton of the trading vessel Southern Cross when the film opens. She becomes involved in a murder and, while hiding on a far away island whither the captain has taken her to wait his return from Australia, she meets an ex-marine turned pearl fisher.

To her surprise Tom Brian proposes marriage. Hearing, in due time, that the Southern Cross has gone down with all aboard, Kiddo snatches at happiness. But the cards seem stacked against her and black clouds roll low and thunderously before—comes the dawn.

That "The Painted Woman" holds your attention taut despite its familiar pattern and locale is a whole lot in its favor.

New Kind of Full Sleeve on Lanvin Wool Frock Exclusive for the Fall

BY BETTINA BEDWELL.

PARIS.—[Special.]—Sleeve inflation is going to go right on being stylish all this autumn. The French dressmakers, however, have been working like Roman galley slaves to devise big sleeves that are hard to copy, because the out-size sleeve of last spring became too popular in no time as it was so easy to imitate.

The kind of big sleeve, therefore, that will be exclusive and super-smart this fall is the kind that is shown in our sketch today. It is not the particular shape of this sleeve, but its special cut which gives it cachet.

Jeanne Lanvin designed the coat dress, of which this sleeve is the particular and distinguishing detail, and if you will notice the front and back views you will see that arriving at a sleeve like this takes some cutting. Three bias bands of the dark blue wool of which the frock is made lie horizontally along the shoulders across the back of the bodice, descend into the sleeve, and down to below the elbows at the back, giving it most of the pouch it has at the elbows. In front two bias bands enter into the raglan shoulder seams, and from there descend to the wrists. The outer band is gathered at the elbows.

The bodice of this frock is fitted, has a turn over collar at the V-neck, and button down the front with steel buttons. The skirt is slightly flared by circular cutting, and the cloth belt has a steel buckle.

Four-Legged Fish, Link Between Land and Sea, Displayed

Restorations of the so-called four-legged fish, of which numerous specimens are reported to have been found in Greenland by Dr. Lauge Koch, are on exhibition at the Field Museum of Natural History, it was announced yesterday. Fossils found at various places indicate that these creatures were the earliest four-footed inhabitants of forests of the coal age some 250 million years ago, museum officials said.

The museum restorations represent the species designated by paleontologists as diplovertebron, one of the fishlike ancestors of four-footed vertebrates from which evolved both the reptiles and the amphibians, Dr. B. E. Dahlgren, acting curator of botany, said.

"The group of extinct amphibia to which diplovertebron belongs is of importance not only as including the predecessors and ancestors of the very different present day amphibia," Dr. Dahlgren said, "but especially as forming the connecting link between the fishes of the preceding period and the reptiles of the next. To the distinction of being the first backboned animals to move on four legs, and thus of being the pioneers of vertebrate life on land, they add that of being the progenitors of the early reptiles, and through them the birds and mammals, the latter, of course, including the human race."

Cruise Captain Sees Humanity Minus Glamour

"Promenade Deck" Well Worth Reading.

BY DORIS BLAKE.

We've always believed one of the most interesting human documents on record would be a long service ship captain's uncensored comments on human nature as he knows it on the high seas.

We get a good glimpse into the seafaring executive's mind in Ishbel Ross' highly entertaining tale of a world cruise, "Promenade Deck" [Harpers]. We heartily recommend its reading to those who plan a cruise—world, West Indies—any sea venture, in fact, that will cut you adrift from your usual conventional surroundings. It may save mistake making, minor and great.

You will learn from this penetrating study of a group of passengers that exhibitionism of gossip breeding order for privacy's sake were better practiced on the busiest corner of the busiest thoroughfare known to you. A cruiser is a glorified goldfish bowl. Drama.

There is not much time for the captain's observations, but we are permitted to see him standing on the bridge "straining his eyes into the darkness ahead, the least cheerful person on board. He saw five hard months ahead of him, care and responsibility, strange harbors and the monotony that drove crew and passengers to erratic behavior."

In the panorama of faces that swept before him the captain saw "middle aged women starved for romance, travelers who had been everywhere and who made him a target for their ill assorted knowledge, women who talked too much, women who laughed too much, and, above all, women who drank too much."

Women with careers bored the captain. It seemed to him that American wives had too many distractions besides their husbands and children. He preferred the old fashioned kind but where did one find them nowadays? Certainly not on board a cruising ship. Only those hard, smart creatures whom he detested, or savorless matrons who were getting fat, or coy kittens who needed to be spanked, flappers who tried to vamp him in spite of his gray hairs, or spinsters who complicated matters with their odd reactions to his naval uniform.

There were nice women on the cruise, fine ones and old fashioned enough to please the most exacting skipper. Only the "pests" loomed large on the eve of sailing.

Champs Open Final Series Today.

BY EDWARD BURNS.

Cub fans who desire to get a preview of the Chicago cast which will appear against the Yankees in the first game of the world series may do so this afternoon at Wrigley field. Guy Bush, who has been selected to pitch the opener, will make his final public appearance before the big show starts and the other regulars will be on the job.

The tail end Cincinnati Reds, who never play like tailenders when the Cubs are involved, will be the foils for the champions in today's dress rehearsal. They are mad enough about that fifteen inning licking they took last Sunday to play their parts with great vigor.

Most of the regulars are scheduled to play throughout the entire game, with the possible exception of Manager Grimm, whose legs have been O, so tired, and Mark Koenig, who can't get too much rest for his ailing left wrist. Both will stay in long enough for a thorough workout, according to announcements made yesterday.

English Improves.

Dr. Andy Lotshaw, the Cub trainer, said that the rest Woody English has been taking since the pennant was clinched Tuesday had worked wonders for the captain's sprained left thumb. The injury had been giving Woody trouble for weeks, but the young man refused to take a layoff until the pennant winning enterprise was concluded. Each day Woody has played with the thumb heavily bandaged, but he expects to perform without the incumbrance during the big show.

Koenig this morning will shed a big splint made out of bone from a dinosaur's jaw—at least Dr. Lotshaw says it's dinosaur bone. Mark will have to work in tape, however.

Billy Herman's sore leg still is sore, but he gave it a good rest yesterday and thinks that the layoff between tomorrow's game and the opening of the series Wednesday will put him in tip top shape.

Cuyler Forgets Misery.

Kiki Cuyler, who has been ailing in the toes of his left foot and the knee of his right leg, says he barely can remember the sore toes and that the knee will be a million per cent sound, come Wednesday.

Tomorrow's game also will be a world series rehearsal, with the second day cast performing. Lon Warneke will go after victory No. 23, of which he was deprived last Sunday in Cincinnati, when Manager Grimm dropped a throw which would have ended the game in the ninth with Warneke the victor. The misplay enabled the Reds to tie the score, then Lon gave way to a pinch batter in the twelfth, after which Charley Root came in and eventually was credited with the win.

Must Win One.

The Cubs, aside from the necessity of tuning up after the letdown of the last few days, have an additional incentive in their desire to defeat the Reds. They must take one of the games or go down in history as one of the two lowest percentage teams that ever won a major league pennant.

To date the Cubs have won 89 games, the same number won by the Cardinals when they set a new low for victories in a 154 game schedule in 1926. The Cards played a full schedule, so lost 65 games. The Cubs now have lost 63, with today's and tomororw's games the only ones remaining on their cards.

Dawson Shoots 67, Six Under Course Record

Arcola, N. J., Sept. 23.—[Special.]—Johnny Dawson of Chicago shot 67 this morning, cutting six strokes from the course record, to win his first round match in the Arcola tournament. Herbert Parker, Spring Brook club player, forced Dawson to an extra hole before the Chicago golfer won his second match. Tomorrow Dawson will play Robert Sweeney, British Walker cup player.

MAROONS START SEASON AGAINST MONMOUTH TODAY

Stagg to Use Strongest Team, New Shift.

Coach Amos Alonzo Stagg's forty-first University of Chicago football team, which promises to be his best since 1924, will open its season this afternoon against Monmouth on Stagg field. Chicago's full strength will be thrown against the Little Nineteen champions, including the strongest possible Maroon lineup and the new whirlwind shift. The Maroons would use their new white jerseys, too, except that they have not been delivered.

Minor injuries and the failure of several sophomores to complete their scholastic requirements will necessitate a Chicago lineup somewhat different than that which will face Yale at New Haven in the next Maroon game on Oct. 8.

Toigo Is Injured.

Pompeo Toigo, the veteran end, has an injury which will keep him out, and Barton Smith, the California sophomore, probably will start in his place. Ineligibility of Frank Spearing, sophomore, and the gash on Walter Manelkis' face are expected to bring Wayne Rapp, 1931 reserve, and John Womer, sophomore tackle from Oak Park, in at guard. Manelkis can play if necessary, but it will be at the risk of reopening the cut. H. O. Page Jr. will work at full back because Cecil Storey has an examination to complete.

Monmouth Undefeated.

Monmouth, undefeated last year, has been strengthened considerably by sophomores, but it will be without one of its best backs, Brownlow Speer, who is injured.

N. U. PLAYS FROSH

Northwestern's football team will make its first public appearance of the season at Dyche stadium today in a game against the freshmen. An admission of 25 cents will be charged. Proceeds will be used to defray the expenses of the band to the Michigan game. The contest will start at 2:30.

Glenn Bainum, director of the band, will have the Northwestern band of 150 pieces on hand to play before the game and at intervals throughout. Big Ten officials will handle the contest.

Coach Dick Hanley has nominated a starting lineup including six regulars from last year's eleven. They are Manske and Fencl, ends; Dilley, guard; Weldin, center, and Rentner and Sullivan, half backs. Chet Sutton will start in place of Ollie Olson at full. The latter is nursing bruises which may keep him on the sidelines.

Two sophomores will start against the freshmen. They are Al Kawal, quarter back, and Jerry Gottschalk, guard. Bob Gonya, a member of the team two years ago, and Frosty Froberg will be at tackle.

The freshman ranks have been split into two groups, one which will emulate Missouri and the other Michigan formations. The former eleven will start today's game. Both teams pack sufficient power, especially in the line, to provide considerable opposition for the varsity.

COMPLETE RELAXATION—NOT A MIND ON BASEBALL

Boy! That call would have brought Bellhop Kiki Cuyler arunning yesterday at the Carlos hotel. Anything to take your mind off baseball for a day, the Cub right fielder explains.

De Paul Beats St. Viator in Opener, 13-6

De Paul university started its football campaign successfully last night at Loyola university field by defeating St. Viator, 13 to 6. Fifteen hundred watched the opener, which was well played throughout.

De Paul's line attack and driving reverse plays, with Steffen carrying the ball, marched down the field for a first period touchdown. Jablonski plunged the final yards for the six points and Steffen place kicked the seventh point, the ball striking the cross bar and bouncing over.

Harding Returns Kick-off.

This was the score at the half. On the opening kickoff of the third quarter, Harding, St. Viator's right half back, supplied the thrill of the game. He raced 93 yards down the east side line, dodging several tacklers and outracing others to the goal. The try for the point was blocked.

Before the third period was over De Paul scored its second touchdown on another series of line plays, which ended when Steffen ran seven yards at right end on fourth down for the marker. His place kick was low.

Line Plays Stopped.

De Paul made 12 first downs to St. Viator's four, and while the visitors' line play was stopped, St. Viator was in De Paul territory twice in the last quarter by its forward passes. The lineups:

St. Louis, Mo., Sept. 23.—(AP)—The St. Louis Cardinals tightened their hold on sixth place in the National league with an 8 to 4 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates today. Yankees Let 39 Share in Series Profits

Boston, Mass., Sept. 23.—[Special.]—The Yankees today went on record with a proclamation of apportionments of world series money that stamped them as true champions in generosity. They voted to distribute what profits accrue to them through post-season games with the Chicago Cubs so 39 individuals will share.

The Chicago Cubs gave full shares to 22 players and divided two other shares among five players and officials.

Manager Joe McCarthy, Coaches James Burke, Art Fletcher and Cy Perkins, and 22 players will receive full shares.

Half Share; Never in Game.

Pitcher Charlie Devens, the Harvard graduate, who signed on with the club June 25, has been voted a half share, though he has not played a single inning in a league game. However, Devens is slated to oppose Eddie Gallagher, Boston college graduate, who is with the Red Sox, in tomorrow's Yankee-Boston game.

Dusty Allen Cooke, injured outfielder, who has been on the retired list since June 1, will receive a half share.

A half share also will be the reward of Gordon [Dusty] Rhodes, now of the Red Sox, who pitched a Yankee victory early this season and was with the team in several past campaigns.

Five hundred dollars each was voted to Ivy Paul Andrews, Henry Johnson, Edward Phillips, and John Murphy. Murphy is the ex-Fordham pitcher farmed to Newark when Devens was signed. Andrews and Johnson went to the Red Sox in the Danny MacFayden deal. Johnson since has been forced to return to his home in Bradenton, Fla., because of stomach ulcers that developed after an appendicitis operation. Phillips was the catcher borrowed from Newark and later returned during the emergency when Bill Dickey was under his month's suspension.

Groundkeeper Voted $1,000.

Shares of $1,000 each go to Groundkeeper Walter Owens of the Yankee stadium and Fred Logan, veteran clubhouse attendant.

Jimmy Mars, 19 year old bat boy, is voted a $350 cut, the same amount also to go to Eddie Bennett, veteran mascot, who was injured in a taxi accident in May.

As far as is known the Yanks' distribution is the most free handed that has ever been made by a world series team.

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

There is an old belief, and it is a good one when it works, that pitching decides a short baseball series. On that basis the Cubs should wear down the American league Yankees in the big struggle for a world championship and the attendant loot, which opens Wednesday in New York.

But pitching happens to be a factor influenced by other things, particularly in the impending battles. If the Cubs could hit along with the Yankees, the pitching strength of the National league entry would make the series lopsided. But with the Yanks having a vast edge on attack, it means the Cub pitchers, to win, will have to be about 50 per cent more skilled than the men throwing to the Chicago aggregation. The Cub pitchers may be that good, but they'll have to prove it. Their job is to win on a few runs, whereas the Yankee pitchers, aided by the team's hitting, can be free with runs and still triumph.

Seven Skilled Pitchers.

The Cubs, in Guy Bush, Lon Warneke, Charley Root, and Pat Malone, undoubtedly have a quartet that would be hard to equal even if selections were made from the seven other clubs. Behind these four are Bob Smith, Burleigh Grimes, and Bud Tinning. That's a total of seven skilled pitching men, the meaning of which is that Manager Grimm can make as many changes as might be necessary without weakening his defense for the following day.

Grimes has been bounced around considerably in most of his recent starts. Smith hasn't had much luck as a starter. Tinning has been fair in that rôle But any one of the three might, if dropped into a spot, come through with the needed two or three innings of brilliant relief work. It is hardly likely that any of the three will be named as a starter unless Grimm, acting on a hunch that Grimes' heart and spitball might carry him through to one more world series triumph, would gamble on the 39 year old warrior.

Yankees Well Fixed.

In the way of numerical pitching strength Joe McCarthy, the Yank manager, isn't as comfortably fixed as Grimm and neither is the former in as tough a fix as imagined. The inclination is to believe that when McCarthy uses up Charley Ruffing and Vernon Gomez he will be playing long shots for the couple of days following, but there are some back seat occupants in the pitching class who might come through with the balance needed to carry the Yanks over.

George Pipgras, who has been slightly eclipsed this season by the winning record of the left handed Gomez, has been through world series fire on two occasions. He won one of the four straight taken from the Pirates in 1927. He won one of the four straight grabbed from the Cardinals the following fall. He'll undoubtedly start, probably in the third game, if Ruffing and Gomez go the route in the first two.

Allen Next in Line.

Next in line is Johnny Allen, whose won and lost percentage this season excelled that of Gomez, but because of the great hitting power of the Yanks the wins of their pitchers are not of much significance.

Herb Pennock, who is only a year younger than Grimes, still is lurking in the offing for use in case McCarthy might deem it advisable to gamble. McCarthy, it will be recalled, was manager of the Cubs in 1929, when Howard Ehmke stepped out unexpectedly in the opening game and slow balled them to defeat and 13 strikeouts.

Pennock Like Ehmke.

Pennock pitches much as Ehmke did that day. The ball just comes up slowly with the apparent proportions of a balloon, but when the batter swings the balloon isn't there. Having seen that happen once, McCarthy might be tempted to think it could happen again. What he'll have to consider if he ponders this experiment is that the Cubs of 1929 were mostly free swingers, who can be fooled by leisurely pitching. There isn't as much free swinging now.

Gomez, in his last several days this season, was pounded like a busher, and it was evidently because he had lost his stuff. Even if he revives and is his usual self there is some doubt as to whether he can stop a team made up for the most part of right handed hitters. In the Stadium he should be more effective than in Wrigley field, because in the former the

BY FRENCH LANE.

Busy little Miss Brilliant, the most industrious of all the top flight 2 year olds in America, made her twenty-fifth start of the year at Lincoln Fields yesterday. And when they hung out the numbers at the end of the Eastgate purse it was Miss Brilliant's No. 4 which dropped into the winner's slot.

Miss Brilliant ran the fastest race of the afternoon, but she had to come along gamely in the final stages to lead the Kentucky filly, Monk's Star, past the finish line by a half length. And she had to come from behind to do it, for Monk's Star headed into the stretch a half length in front.

Then Miss Brilliant began wearing down Monk's Star, and the favorite players—she was at odds-on in the betting—began to cheer. She answered their shouts and pulled away in the final stages. Absolution, from Mrs. Helen Hay Whitney's Greentree stable, was third, beating Jessie Dear out of the show end of the purse in the last strides.

Her Eighth Victory.

Miss Brilliant races for R. C. Schwartz of Mobile and is a daughter of Brilliant-Gad. In twenty-five starts she has won eight races and a total of $7,775. She has been out of the money only seven times during her busy racing career.

If it hadn't been for Miss Brilliant's sparkling effort, Jockey Wayne Wright, the far western youngster who rides for A. A. Baroni, would have been the whole show for the crowd of 9,000.

Wright, just over a severe injury, won the first three races, which included the daily double. It was the first time during the Lincoln Fields season that one jockey has kicked home both winners of the daily double.

Double Pays $83.38.

The daily double winners were Patricia Grey and Wee Drop. Wright slipped Patricia Grey through on the rail, saved a dozen lengths, and got her up just in time to nip Olive Sabath. Wright was all but left at the post with Wee Drop, but got the judges' decision over Dawn Mist in a nose and nose finish. Holders of the daily double tickets collected $83.38.

Wright's first victory came on Scotland Beauty, which races for C. W. Hay, general manager of the Washington Park track. Rushing out into a long early lead, Scotland Beauty threatened to make a runaway of it. She was far in front as the stretch run started. At that stage Winnie C., the favorite, began moving upon her, but Scotland Beauty held on to win by two lengths.

Rides Fourth Winner.

Later in the afternoon Wright got home on his fourth winner when he drove St. Jim to victory. He got up just in time to head Infinity and win going away by two lengths. It was the first time during the Lincoln Fields season that a jockey has ridden four winners.

ATHLETICS BEAT SENATORS, 8 TO 4; CLINCH 2D PLACE

Haas, Simmons and Kuhel Hit Home Runs.

Philadelphia, Pa., Sept. 23.—(AP)—The Athletics assured themselves of the second place cut in the world series proceeds today by defeating the Washington Senators, 8 to 4.

A heavy shower which held up the game 47 minutes during the fourth inning brought about the downfall of Monte Weaver, Washington's star right hander. Just before time was called Mickey Cochrane singled. After play was resumed Al Simmons hit his 35th homer of the season over the right field wall, putting the Athletics ahead to stay.

Mule Haas of the A's and Joe Kuhel of Washington also hit homers, but Jimmie Foxx, major league leader, could get only a double. Score:

SCHOOLBOYS, 16, WIN HORSESHOE PITCHING TITLE

Two 16 year old Chicago high school boys who never hitched or drove a horse in their lives yesterday won the horseshoe pitching championship of the central states on the Midway of a Century of Progress, Chicago's 1933 World's Fair.

The victory makes John Colao, one of these boys, who won Thursday's singles championship, double titleholder in America's classic rural sport over champions of Illinois, Iowa, Michigan, Indiana, Ohio, and Missouri. His teammate, Harry Stromberg, tied for fourth place in the singles.

Colao lives at 6445 South Damen avenue and is a student at Lindblom High school. He expects to matriculate at the University of Michigan in February. Stromberg lives at 31 East 112th street and is in the junior class at Fenger High school. Stromberg was the only pitcher to win a game from Colao on Thursday.

Bill Dickey Is Very Sad, but Still a Great Catcher

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Sept. 23.—For catching purposes in the impending world series the Yankees will use broken hearted Bill Dickey, a most unhappy young athlete, who held out against a reduction in pay last spring, won his point after some debate, and, presently, when the season was well under way and everything was prosperous with him, lost $1,000 cash through an unfortunate mishap.

On the Fourth of July Dickey, who is long and lean, with a forehead which an architect would describe as a setback or sun deck, and a strong throwing arm, took a free throw at Carl Reynolds of the Washington Senators and broke his jaw. He did not realize it at the time, but when the deferred pain set in this punch hurt him much worse than it hurt Reynolds. Will Harridge, the president of the American league, fined Dickey $1,000 and suspended him for 30 days.

Possibly the pain was even worse than $1,000 worth, because the management of the Yankees might have suspended his pay for 30 days, too, which would have brought the cost of that punch at Reynolds' chin to more than $3,000. They are very secretive about their business affairs in the baseball business, so it is not known whether Dickey's pay was stopped while he was laid off. Still he had held out for his price in the spring, hadn't he, and that doesn't endear a player to a magnate, does it?

Ruppert Hollers and Hollers but Gets Nowhere.

Jake Ruppert, as owner of the Yanks, who were not yet assured of a pennant, thought the punch hurt him more than it had hurt both Reynolds and Dickey together, because Dickey was one of the key men of his team and, at the time, the best catcher in the American league. He hollered around somewhat, trying to induce Harridge to lift the suspension. He had property interests at stake and Mr. Harridge might be doing him out of a pennant in disciplining his employé. There was indubitably something in what he said about all this.

So Dickey idled around for 30 days serving his time and mooning about the $1,000 cash, and any other losses that may have been incidental to the sentence of the court, and when he came back some shadow seemed to have flitted across his life. He hasn't been as frisky or helpful to the ball club as he was before July 4.

This Dickey Is Just a Real Good Ball Player.

The difficulty of describing the personalities of professional athletes is that if you don't paint them as fascinating characters of great wit you seem to be running them down. But Dickey is neither charming, funny, nor nimble at repartee and is, in round numbers, just a proficient assembly of muscles, skill, and nerves animated by the character of a commonplace Arkansas country boy. He is tall and sinewy and he throws a ball down to second so hard and heavy that Lazzeri sometimes rips off his glove, blows on his fingers to cool them off, and yells shrill complaints.

There was testimony that Dickey hit Reynolds when Reynolds was not on guard, but walking away and looking elsewhere, and the best that was said in Dickey's defense was that he had been sorely tried by the charging attacks of base runners coming into the plate in several recent games before Reynolds bowled him over. Of course, Dickey has no right to block the plate, but if a catcher doesn't block it, even before he has the ball in hand, he soon becomes a second string, presently a minor league catcher, and eventually an ex-catcher.

Well, so he isn't sweet nor magnetic, but even in his present semi-slump is regarded as the best catcher in the American league, and this will be his first world series, because he came up to the Yankees in 1928 as a recruit too late to be eligible and too green to be used, anyway, in the last world series to which they were a party.

Bengough—Now There Was a Lad with Color.

Their head man behind the bat at that time was Benny Bengough. Now there was a boy who had IT. He could sing and tell stories and he fascinated the patrons when he threw off his mask and cap to go after high fouls by revealing a gleaming expanse of absolutely nude dome. The patrons are not hard to fascinate.

But the next year Benny developed a pain in his arm and Dickey took over the job. When Bengough's arm improved somewhat he was used against left hand pitchers, but Dickey soon crowded him out. He was a better thrower, a better hitter against any kind of pitchers, with a tendency to hit them out of bounds, and almost as good a receiver as Bengough.

CAPABLE

EVERYBODY HAS GOOD TIME AS SOX LOSE, 13 TO 6

Cleveland, O., Sept. 23.—[Special.]—The White Sox and Indians, who will hold a track meet Sunday, put on a rehearsal here this afternoon, Cleveland winning, 13 to 6.

It took on a comedy aspect almost from the first and reached its height when Lew Fonseca went in as a relief pitcher in the sixth after the first seven men had reached base off Bill Chamberlain, five of them scoring. There were two on and none out, but the manager retired three batters in a row. Chad Kimsey finished.

Cleveland scored three in the first and five in the third off young Ed Walsh, who was relieved in that inning with one out, Gallivan stopping the rally.

Moriarty Chases Berry.

Umpire George Moriarty worked the first Chicago-Cleveland game since he was the victim of the slugging episode here earlier in the season. He chased Charley Berry in the fourth, apparently because of something the Sox catcher said from the dugout.

The Indians wasted no time letting Walsh know they didn't care if his dad was a great pitcher. Burnett walked to open the first and went to third on Powers' single to right. Both scored on Averill's double to left and Earl came home when Cissell punched a single past short.

Walsh went to pieces in the third. There were five runs in and only one out when he was taken out, the crowning blow being a double by Wesley Ferrell. Gallivan retired the next two men. Walsh's two and one-third innings record was eight runs, six hits, and five bases on balls.

Errors Help the Sox.

With two out in the fifth, Montague fumbled Gallivan's grounder and then threw past first for two errors. When Vosmik dropped Funk's line drive the pitcher came home with the Sox's first run.

Then the Sox put on a five run splurge in the sixth. Seeds started it with a single to left and went to third on Sullivan's hit to right. Swanson singled to center, scoring Bon, but Sullivan was out trying to make third. The fourth straight hit off Ferrell was Kowalik's single to center which sent Swanson home. Kress hit to Burnett, but Kowalik was safe at second when Cissell dropped the throw. Grube walked, filling the bases, and Pinch Hitter English also walked. Kowalik trotting home. Funk also was passed, Kress coming in. Grube scored when Hayes beat out a bunt, but Seeds and Sullivan went out.

After Fonseca had made his debut as a pitcher in the sixth. Pytlak fouled to Sullivan, Ferrell flied to Swanson and Hayes threw out Burnett. Vosmik hit a homer in this inning with two on. There was no more scoring.

In the Wake of the News

FOOTBALL FORECASTING.

NOW comes the season when The Wake, as a football forecaster, attempts to pick winners of football games between sectional leaders in all parts of the country. While results have been, at times, very successful in the past, the additional hazard of naming the scores not infrequently leads to estimates at wide variance with actual totals recorded.

There are several reasons for this. The first, naturally, is a false appraisal of strength. Then again there may be upsets from the dope, affecting not only the result but the score as well. There may be luck or injuries, or a coach's wish to run up or keep down the count. There are plenty of disturbing factors.

In general, forecasting in this column is based on supposed dope. That dope embraces past performances, what we read in newspapers from distant points, what we are told by coaches and observers, and conferences with other members of the staff who may have seen or heard something additional. These forecasts are not published with any idea of their being good or bad bets. Often, if we were betting—which we never do—we would wager on the team picked to lose, either because of the odds or some other consideration.

Originally we were quite a "hunch" picker. Occasionally we still pick a team which does not figure to win, but it is not possible in the limited space to explain each such selection or the reason therefor.

While we would not choose this task, if it had not been ordered as part of our work, it's sort of fun to pit one's judgment against the uncertainties of football. The forecasts purport only to be the composite opinion of a bunch of fellows interested in gridiron contests. All right, let's go.

Just a Comedy

Ruffing is half way between a side-arm and overhand pitcher. On form you would pick him to show greater effectiveness than Gomez against the Cubs. If Ruffing should pitch the opener and win, McCarthy probably would shoot him right back in the first game at Chicago, thus delaying Pipgras' appearance for one day. Allen, like Ruffing, is a sidearm workman.

Warneke, the Cub wizard, is a cross between sidearm and overhand. He's fast, has a good curve which he slows for a change of pace, and a body twisting delivery, which, like that of Bush, helps to hinder the batter's timing of the pitch. But Warneke's greatest asset is control.

Root is essentially a fast ball pitcher with a fair curve which he also uses when he slows down. Root's quick delivery and control also are big factors in his success. Bush is fast and can throw a wicked curve, but this year has been depending greatly on a newly developed screw ball.

Grimes' Fighting Heart Makes Up for What His Arm Has Lost

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

If you see a bewhiskered, slightly aged fellow snarling at umpires, opponents and about everything else during the impending world series you needn't bother to ask who he is. You'll know it is Burleigh Grimes. Of course, you may not see him except in a relief or rescue rôle, but that will be sufficient opportunity for the vetern spitballer to show that when it is a matter of winning a ball game he is just the fightinest, most determined gentleman that ever stepped on a rubber.

It's a long time since Burleigh did his first battling in a world series game. And it is only a year ago that he did his last. The last was even more brilliant than the first. The span of years between 1920 and 1931 had taken something from his arm, but not his heart. They picked him to pitch for the Cardinals in the seventh and deciding struggle with the Athletics, and how he pitched. He was a tired old man toward the end and a younger arm was rushed to his rescue, but the last minute foldup didn't take any of the luster from what he had accomplished in the previous innings.

He's Good Trading Material, Whether He's Bought or Sold.

Mr. Grimes has been around ball parks for so long that there hardly is any necessity of going back farther than 1920 when he made three attempts to pitch Brooklyn to a win over the Cleveland Indians. One of the attempts was successful and the two others were at least brilliant. Later on Burleigh began drifting around the league. He moved rapidly from New York to Boston and to St. Louis. There was nothing wrong with his work or his temperament. It just happened that a lot of owners regarded him as good trading material, whether it was passing him on or accepting him.

His St. Louis visit was limited to two seasons, in each of which his team was a series entry, both times against the Athletics. They done him wrong in 1930, beating him in his only two starts, but he balanced the scale last fall. At the age of 38 when most big league pitchers have gone over the hill, he snatched back those two decisions and made the powerful Athletics bury their bats under home plate.

He's a Big Help to Club, Even If He Never Does Any Pitching.

Grimes, because he is always carrying on a verbal war with somebody when he's pitching, is generally regarded as a cranky old fellow, who doesn't know how to laugh. Instead of that Burleigh is a great fun maker, although his victims don't always see the funny side. He is the best "ribber" in baseball and whenever his mates discover shoes, shirts, hats, etc., mysteriously missing from their locker they know the identity of the guilty party. But knowing that much doesn't help him locate the missing items.

Those on the inside regard Grimes as a great help to any ball team, exclusive of what pitching he might do. He's a great talker, or as the ball players term it "barbering," and the "hair cuts" he gives his mates are always on baseball. Nobody has to tell him how to pitch to any batter that he has once seen. And he is such a student of pitching that even today, with his career seemingly drawing to a close, he tries to think up new pitching ideas, such as different grips and different deliveries.

"I always try to work some new pitching wrinkle between seasons," he said years ago and he's tried to make good on it. That's why he throws about every kind of ball from every possible delivery.

Veteran Back Hurts Chest in Scrimmage.

Minneapolis, Minn., Sept. 22.—[Special.]—The first serious injury of the season on the Minnesota football squad occurred today when My Ubl, veteran backfield player, was ordered to the health service with a bruised chest, suffered in scrimmage yesterday. Coach Bernie Bierman said it will be a week or 10 days before Ubl will be ready to play again.

Only one important change was made in the varsity lineup today. Appman, veteran guard, was sent to the second team with Richard Potvin taking his place. Ubl was replaced by Burg with a newcomer—Eichen—also getting a trial.

MICHIGAN'S TACKLING POOR.

Ann Arbor, Mich., Sept. 23.—[Special.]—A punt covering drill this morning brought forth such a poor demonstration of tackling that Coach Harry Kipke put his entire Michigan squad through a long workout in fundamentals this afternoon. The demonstration was particularly unsatisfactary because the one big scrimmage of the pre-season practice will be held tomorrow. Herm Everhardus' punting and returns by Harry Newman and Louis Westover were impressive.

IRISH SCRIMMAGE TODAY.

Notre Dame, Ind., Sept. 23.—[Special.]—Threatened shakeups in the Notre Dame varsity may come tomorrow in scrimmages against the freshmen. Mike Koken will start at left half back with the first team, but Nick Lukats also will get a chance with the same line and back field. Today's drill consisted of blocking and tacking the dummy and signal drill.

PURDUE SQUAD RESTS.

Lafayette, Ind., Sept. 23.—[Special.]—Purdue's football squad was excused from strenuous drill today when the entire workout was devoted to brushing up on fundamentals preparatory to tomorrow's practice scrimmage. Several shakeups in lineups were imminent following the varsity's poor showing against the freshmen yesterday.

BOURBON KING'S BONES WILL BE SHIPPED TO ITALY

Take Tomb of Charles X. to Vienna Depot.

BY WILLIAM SHIRER.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

VIENNA, Austria, Sept. 23. — A couple of old nags hauled a shabby looking wagon through the streets of Vienna towards the railroad station today, and few who saw knew that the burly load was the sarcophagus of Charles X., last of the great Bourbon kings of France, who was chased from Paris in 1830. Other wagons behind brought along the sarcophagi of six Bourbon princesses and one prince, followed after the king in death as in life.

King Charles died in 1836 and the prince and princesses were buried in the Franciscan convent of Castagnavizza at Goerz, then belonging to Austria. During the war Goerz suddenly found itself in "no man's land" between the front lines of the Austrian and Italian armies.

Avoid Bombarding Cloister.

Both armies knew that the Bourbons were buried there and for months Austrian and Italian artillery purposely avoided bombarding the cloister.

At the beginning of the bitter battle of Isonzo, the Italians, on the advice of Marshal Joffre of France, decided to shell the town to dislodge the Austrian concentrations just behind it.

Austrians say that Empress Zita heard of the Italian intentions and prevailed on the Austrian command to remove the sarcophagi to Vienna. This was done secretly in 1917.

Recently Franz Xavier, brother of the former empress and head of the house of Bourbon-Parma, asked the Austrian government for permission to take the tombs back to their original resting place, which is now Italian territory and known as Gorizia.

Tombs Are Empty.

The request was granted and today workmen crated the sarcophagi, weighing three tons, and placed them in a shed from where they will be shipped to Italy.

The tombs are empty. The bones of the Bourbons will remain in the Carmelite cloister here until the sarcophagi are put into place at Gorizia. Then, under a heavy guard, they will be transported to Italy and placed in their proper tombs.

PENN RAILROAD LEASES LA SALLE STREET CORNER

BY AL CHASE.

Signatures were placed on a five year lease yesterday which will give La Salle street, probably Chicago's gloomiest business thoroughfare after sundown, a brightly lighted corner in the heart of the financial district. The Pennsylvania railroad has leased the corner store in the Borland building, at the southeast corner of La Salle and Monroe streets, and on Dec. 1 will move its city ticket offices from the Insurance Exchange building to that location. W. W. Jones, agent of the Borland building, negotiated the lease.

According to C. E. McCullough, general passenger agent of the Pennsylvania R. R., the new city ticket office will have mahogany fittings and furniture will have its windows brilliantly lighted until late at night. The space to be occupied by the railroad will be 600 square feet. This corner at one time was occupied by the bond department of the Central Trust company of Illinois, now the Central Republic Bank and Trust company.

Supplants Present Office.

Mr. McCullough stated that the present office in the Eastern Lines Consolidated Ticket office group in the Insurance Exchange will be discontinued by the Pennsylvania. The Pensylvania already has a city ticket office in the Forman bank building, 23 North La Salle street and another in the London Guaranty building, on North Michigan avenue.

The Borland building, an eighteen story structure, recently had a complete new and noiseless elevator system of unit control and double door lifts installed. Although the rental terms of the Pennsylvania lease were not disclosed, it is understood that the lessee will pay a considerably higher rate than is general at present in the neighborhood.

Convey Loop Corner.

Title to the southwest corner of La Salle and Lake streets, 60x80, has been conveyed by the Chicago Title and Trust company and Mae Rosenwald Herbst, trustees of the estate of Morris Rosenwald, to Harlan W. Cooley for an undisclosed consideration, subject to an incumbrance of $120,000.

T. M. Watkins of Paducah, Ky., distributor in this territory for a mineral water from Texas, has leased the store at 111 West Madison street, through Hooker and Sloason. Several other stores will be opened later, the brokers state.

Lars Saarela has sold his fifteen flats at the southeast corner of Seeley and Arthur avenues to John Hammar for an indicated $68,000, subject to $63,000. Mr. Hammar gave in part payment the twelve apartments at 7303 North Damen avenue, subject to $50,000. John J. Kern & Co. represented both parties and will continue to manage the properties.

Overestimated Buying Power.

TO THE EDITOR: I am coming to you as others have and hope you can help me solve my problem, as some years ago a friend of mine advised, "Put your money in real estate, pay your taxes, and you will have something no one can take from you." Thereby hangs my tale.

I bought a 6 room brick house in Joliet in 1928 for $10,500, paying $2,500 down. The first mortgage on the property is $6,500. The second mortgage is paid down to $850. My husband has been out of work for more than a year. I am a nurse and have only been able to work occasionally and earn enough to buy food. Interest on the first mortgage is paid to date. We have been unable to keep up our payments on the second mortgage, and owe since February, 1932.

The second mortgage holder in the bank is pressing us for payments and threatens to foreclose. He claims that in order to protect his investment the property will cost him $8,345. This includes the first mortgage, second mortgage, $195 interest on the first mortgage, $700 delinquent payments on the second mortgage, and $150 foreclosure expense. He also claims the property will not sell for more than $7,000 at the present market, and claims he will secure a deficiency judgment against us. Now I want to know if this can be done.—Mrs. J. McC.

ANSWER: Thousands of people have made the same mistake you made in overestimating their purchasing power. Apparently a large majority of us figured the boom days would continue forever, this thought alone being responsible for most of our ills today.

The statement regarding the deficiency judgment is correct. Your position is an unhealthy one and we suggest you try to work out an agreement with the second mortgage holder, possibly offering to turn the property over, thereby saving the expense of foreclosure and preventing deficiency judgment from being filed against you. If this cannot be done you will be ordered to appear in court, and the court will decide what disposition shall be made.

Plans Improvements.

TO THE EDITOR: I own my home clear and taxes are paid to date. The house is 15 years old and needs repairs. I plan putting on a new roof, having a new furnace installed, and painting and decorating. My neighbor says prices will go down lower. What do you advise?—J. J. K.

ANSWER: Prices on the work you refer to are lower than they have been for many years. We recommend you get several figures on the work and go ahead at this time. We can't predict future prices. If property is worth owning it's worth keeping in good repair.

FOUR EASTERN MERGER ROADS REACH ACCORD

Move Nearer I. C. C. Trunk Line Plan.

New York, Sept. 23.—[Special.]—Twelve years of effort to unify the eastern railroads under four systems ended successfuly today at a quiet meeting of executives in the Pennsylvania station.

After conferring for three hours over final points on subjects that have aroused debate and contention for more than a decade, the heads of the New York Central, Pennsylvania, Baltimore and Ohio, and Chesapeake and Ohio dispersed with a brief announcement that they had reached an agreement on consolidation of $8,000,000,000 in railroad properties.

"The executives of the four systems have agreed and composed all differences between themselves arising from the interstate commerce commission's four system consolidation plan of July 1, 1932," read the statement. "The four system plan does not include the New England lines except the Boston and Albany railroad, and therefore that question was not considered."

Accept I. C. C. Plan.

This statement means that the four trunk lines have accepted the commission's plan as the basis for future unification moves and have erased any differences of opinion they may have had among themselves on certain aspects of the plan.

The four trunk lines propose now to proceed gradually in enlarging their systems by the acquisition of the shorter lines which the commission found to be in the public interest. The agreement reached today gives each system a minimum of three years to devise terms under which these transactions may be brought about.

The significance in the trunk lines reaching an agreement at this time was described as twofold. It means that greater economies will be made possible in the east to offset declines in revenues which have in some cases dropped to their lowest levels in about twenty years. It means also that with what was admittedly the most complicated aspect of general railroad consolidation settled the way will be open to unifications in other parts of the country.

Northwest Merger Possible.

In the northwest, for example, it is believed possible that efforts to merge the Great Northern and the Northern Pacific, which have been in abeyance for two years, may be resumed as the result of today's eastern settlement.

The effect of this agreement will be to set up in the east four systems fairly evenly balanced as to assets, mileage, and outlets to Atlantic and great lakes ports and to the west. It will enable each of the four systems to compete more favorably with the motor vehicle, the pipe line, the electric transmission line, and, to a lesser extent, the government supported waterway, all of which have cut seriously into railway revenues in recent years. Economies from the groupings will be realized through the elimination of duplicating facilities and from more economical routing of traffic.

The mileage, chief properties and asset value of the four systems will be as follows:

NEW YORK CENTRAL.

Delaware, Lackawanna and Western, except the Oswego branch; Virginian railway; Rutland, of which control is now shared with the New York, New Haven and Hartford, except the Ogdensburg and Lake Champlain division; one-fourth interest in the Lehigh and New England, Montour railroad and in the Pittsburgh and West Virgina east of Gould's tunnel; mileage 7,900; assets, $1,950,000,000.

PENNSYLVANIA.

Wabash; Detroit, Toledo and Ironton; one-half interest in the Raritan River railroad; one-fourth interest in the Lehigh and New England, Montour and Pittsburgh and West Virginia east of Gould's tunnel; mileage, 13,034 including 2,500 for the Wabash]; assets, $2,428,000,000.

BALTIMORE AND OHIO.

Reading company, Central of New Jersey, Western Maryland, Ann Arbor, Detroit and Toledo Shore line, Lehigh and Hudson River, Alton railroad, Buffalo, Rochester and Pittsburgh, Buffalo and Susquehanna, one-half interest in the Raritan River railroad, one-quarter interest in the Montour and Lehigh and New England; mileage, 8,838; assets, $1,964,000,000.

CHESAPEAKE AND OHIO-NICKEL PLATE.

Lehigh Valley, Oswego branch of the Lackawanna, Bessemer and Lake Erie, Wheeling and Lake Erie, Pittsburgh and West Virginia west of Gould's tunnel and one-fourth interest in the line east of the tunnel, Pittsburgh, Shawmut and Northern, Chicago and Eastern Illinois, Erie, one-fourth interest in the Lehigh and New England and Montour; mileage, 8,106; assets, $1,746,000,000.

Uncle Sam Is Fast Becoming Biggest Banker

BY SCRUTATOR.

What with all the complaints of "government in business," the largest kind of business yet tackled by Uncle Sam appears to have escaped serious objection thus far. It is banking. In fact, the government Reconstruction Finance corporation now is really the leading banker in the country and is on the way to an even more commanding position.

Probably the chief reason that there has been little complaint concerning this new phase of government activity is the fact that the banks themselves have been beneficiaries. Furthermore, most of the banking done by the Reconstruction Finance corporation has been of a kind that the banks did not care to undertake themselves.

Loan More Than Billion.

Last month Secretary of the Treasury Mills reported that the corporation has authorized loans totaling $1,219,000,000 apportioned among 4,947 institutions. One out of every five banks in the country was helped, and, in addition, there were loans to railroads, insurance companies, mortgage loan concerns, building and loan companies and agricultural financial institutions.

Loans already made exceed those of any private bank in the country. How the government loans compare is shown by the fact that the Chase National bank, New York, has total of about $1,150,000,000, while loans of the National City and Guaranty Trust bank, also New York, and the Continental Illinois Bank and Trust company, Chicago, range from slightly above $500,000,000 to just above $900,000,000. However, if the Reconstruction Finance corporation expands its loan to the maximum, which exceeds three billion dollars, it will be far and away the country's biggest banker.

Banks Won't Make Loans.

"Many of the loans made by the Reconstruction Finance corporation would not be touched by a commercial banker," Poor's Analytical Services says, in comment on the situation. "In fact, the corporation does not loan unless the applicant can obtain no banking assistance. But often the reason the applicant can obtain no loan from a bank is not because the risk is poor but because the banks are unable or unwilling to loan.

"Thus the corporation has assumed not only the banking functions of commercial and investment bankers and of the investing community, but also of lending risks that no private institution would take even in normal times. Some publicity has been given to its pay roll. It was reported that it exceeded $1,500,000 annually, that 118 officials received more than $4,800 a year, and that ten received more than $12,000 a year. The directors receive $10,000.

"A pay roll of $1,500,000 may seem excessive in these hard times. Critics may point accusing fingers at the government and its extravagance, but such criticism is not warranted. The pay roll is not at all excessive for a banking institution the size of this gigantic government enterprise. The corporation is not under the surveillance of the civil service, hence the directors may pay any price they wish for the services of experts.

"The Reconstruction Finance corporation needs money and brains and it is to be hoped that no inferior help is hired in an effort to save money. Able men are in command of the corporation and congress will show wisdom if it permits the directors to maintain and pay the personnel."

U. S. CHAMBER OF COMMERCE O. K.'S A 40 HOUR WEEK

Washington, D. C., Sept. 23.—[Special.]—Adoption of a forty hour work week as a means of spreading jobs during the present unemployment emergency was recommended today by the board of directors of the United States Chamber of Commerce through its adoption of the report of the chamber's special committee on working periods in industry.

Members of the board announced that they would urge industrial, commercial, and other employers to support the program by spreading work in offices, stores, banks, plants, and other places of business on a forty hour week basis.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Sept. 23.—An advance of 25 cents a ton in Pittsburgh heavy smelting steel was reported today, but other sections of the country are unchanged. The Pittsburgh advance brought the quotation to $9.75 a ton.

Supplies of scrap at Pittsburgh have not been increased and dealers are having difficulty covering old orders at lower prices. A recent order for 5,000 tons brought $10, while a larger tonnage was placed at $9.75. At Cincinnati there is also a shortage of scrap, lending a firmer tone to the market.

COMMERCE GROUP FINDS EVIDENCE OF BETTER TRADE

A marked pickup in the millinery trade, with pay rolls of some of the larger producers up 10 per cent, a firmer tone in demands for railroad supplies, and more activity by distributors of groceries are the latest commercial developments in the Chicago district, according to the Chicago Association of Commerce.

Deny Receiver; Give Frisco a "New Chance"

St. Louis, Mo., Sept. 23.—(AP)—Stating his belief that business conditions will "get better," Federal Judge C. B. Faris today dismissed the first of two suits to throw the St. Louis-San Francisco railroad into receivership.

In dismissing the suit filed by Charles and Dora Gans, holders of $3,500 in prior lien bonds of the road, and other intervening bondholders, Judge Faris said he believed the road should have another chance.

Recommends Nursing.

"If I were convinced, as I am not," he said, "that existing business conditions would continue indefinitely, then I should bravely consider appointing a receiver here. But I feel reasonably sure that, as business conditions can scarcely get worse, they will, of necessity, get better. Business depressions have always in the past been self-limited. Like certain diseases, good nursing furnishes the only remedy.

"I am not called on to pick out the corner behind which prosperity is hiding, but I am of the opinion that by now the hope of better things is so far warranted that a further chance should be given this railroad."

Answers Petitioners.

Counsel for the bondholders, he said, argued to the effect that "the depression will continue indefinitely, if not forever" while counsel for the road predicted a return to prosperity. Another receivership suit against the road by stockholders is still pending. Judge Faris said he was not deciding the question of dismissal on strictly legal grounds but rather on the broader question of whether receivers ought to be appointed for the road "under the condition and situation existing."

HIGHER RATES ON PARCEL POST EFFECTIVE OCT. 1

The postoffice department, calling attention to the new rates which were approved in February by the interstate commerce commission, said today that the increases were intended to cut into the annual deficit this class of mail has produced. Based on revenues and expenditures for 1930, the department figured that parcel post was being handled at a net loss of $15,000,000.

While there was a material loss on parcels in the first three zones, those beyond were handled at a profit. The new scales are designed to equalize the rates. No change is to be made on parcels for local delivery.

The increases will run from 1 to 3 cents, depending upon the weight and distance.

Chicago Heights Bank to Pay 10% More to Depositors

A second payment of 10 per cent, amounting to $44,751.44 was ordered paid to depositors of the closed Commercial bank of Chicago Heights yesterday by Judge Joseph Burke, sitting in chancery in the Circuit court. An earlier payment ordered by Judge Burke was for 15 per cent. Checks will be mailed Monday.

INFLUENCE OF ICE CUBES EYED BY POWER MEN

Engineers for the company have just reported to them that a new and as yet unknown factor is affecting the ups and downs of power consumption in the Chicago district.

This summer they have observed for the first time that when the temperature rises above 70 degrees the consumption of electricity rises rather sharply.

Putting their heads together they concluded that the enormous increase in the number of electric refrigerators in use in Chicago had something to do with it.

"We found," says one of them, "that electric refrigerators were well enough insulated to prevent large additional consumption of power for ordinary use.

"The only possible conclusion is that the larger power use in hot weather is due to the fact that people make more ice cubes and frozen salads.

"In the past temperature has been an important factor in the business of Commonwealth Edison only when the thermometer dropped below 30 degrees and the electric heaters in street cars and elevated trains were turned on."

Helping the Railroads.

As a measure of "financial relief" to the railroads the interstate commerce commission has waived for 1932 the ruling railroad companies take inventory of materials and supplies. The requirements have been in effect since 1914. While the cost of making such an inventory is considerable railroad men believe that the commission will have to furnish other forms of "relief" before the carriers get back on a sound basis.

Copper Trade Sees Price Upturn.

The copper trade is optimistic that the next price movement will be upward. The domestic and foreign price at present is holding around 6¼ cents a pound. Copper men explain their optimism by pointing out that world refinery stocks dropped from 2,000 tons in August while production fell off 10,000 tons. The fabricating plants which are carrying fairly sizable supplies of the metal are said to be receiving releases on some old orders. It is admitted, however, that new orders are light.

Trade Reviews Show Trend Up Sustains Pace

New York, Sept. 23.—[Special.]—The general trend toward increased business has been well sustained, with increases in retail trade in some districts so sharp that wholesalers are hard put to meet demands of customers for immediate shipments, the trade reviews reported today.

Dun's Review says, in part:

"The rising confidence in fall trade, encouraged by an active consumer response for higher priced merchandise, has brought about a new faith, with a tangible evidence displayed in the substantial orders for goods of the better quality being placed for immediate and future delivery.

Unit, Dollar Sales Better.

"Even though the weather was unseasonably warm, department stores in the leading centers of distribution attracted crowds that had all the semblance of the Christmas shopping periods. On many days both unit sales and dollar totals made the best showing of any comparative days in the last two years, while others had more sales than on the same days a year ago, but the predominance of low priced merchandise brought dollar totals slightly lower."

"Seasonal advances recently noted continue to be sustained, according to Bradstreet's, and fall goods have found a fairly good call, especially in department stores."

Confidence Returning.

"That this recovery can only be slow is generally realized; there are still complicated problems for which no satisfactory solutions have been found. But the marked trend away from abject despair and toward a sober but confident attitude is highly encouraging.

"The reports show that the seasonal advances noted recently continued sustained.

EDGEWATER GULF HOTEL LOSER IN SUIT ON BONDS

Gulfport, Miss., Sept. 23.—(AP)—A judgment for $930,341 in favor of the First Union Trust and Savings bank of Chicago and Rufus F. Chapin, trustee for bondholders, was handed down today by Chancellor D. M. Russell against the Edgewater Gulf hotel. The decree authorized a foreclosure sale of the hotel to satisfy the bond mortgage, unless the judgment is paid by Oct. 1.

COOLIDGE RAIL GROUP ALMOST READY TO ACT

Scope of Inquiry Is Outlined.

New York, Sept. 23.—(AP)—Formation of a national railway commission, headed by former President Calvin Coolidge, was understood in Wall street today to have been virtually completed and a formal announcement was expected within the next few days.

The commission, which is to make a thorough study of the national transportation problem with the view of later recommending congressional action to eradicate the existing sore spots, is to be sponsored, it was said, by the National Association of Mutual Savings Banks, other large financial institutions, insurance companies, and important public organizations.

While the details of the proposed inquiry are being rather closely guarded, it was variously reported that agreement had been reached on the following:

1. The commission will be nonpartisan and free in every respect and will act upon its own initiative in conducting the railway inquiry.

Will Get no Salaries.

2. The commissioners will receive no salaries or other compensation for their work, but will contribute their services as a public duty.

3. The railroads themselves will have no part in the formation of the commission or its activities and will be asked to furnish information only, through testimony and statistics.

4. The commission will particularly stress the point that it is representing no one organization or political party; that fundamentally it is acting on behalf of the public and the thousands of security holders affected by the operations of the carriers.

5. The expenses of the inquiry will be provided by the various sponsoring organizations, and the initial sum to be provided for this purpose may be as much as $100,000, although this has not been actually decided.

An investigating commission has for some time, been under consideration by the large banks and insurance companies whose portfolios consist largely of railroad securities.

Has Suggested Names.

It was at first proposed that Mr. Coolidge form a committee of one to take over the inquiry. It was understood that the former chief executive, however, suggested that the idea was a good one, but that he believed it would be better to have a commission composed of several prominent national figures.

Originally it was thought the commission might be composed of Mr. Coolidge and two others. Then a committee of five was suggested. It is believed that the latter number was finally decided upon, although this is only a conjecture broached in the financial district.

COMMENT IN CHICAGO.

Officers of the National Industrial Traffic league here have indicated interest in the suggestion that a commission of disinterested men, headed by former President Calvin Coolidge, make an investigation of the present critical railroad situation and recommend measures for improving it. Herman Mueller, president, and George A. Blair, chairman of the executive committee, have written Mr. Coolidge, saying that they note with gratification that he will accept leadership of such a commission, and have tendered the coöperation of the National Industrial Traffic league, an organization composed entirely of commercial and industrial shippers.

Midwest Gets New Revenue from Soy Beans

BY PAUL POTTER.

Soy beans, newest midwest farm crop of commercial importance, have taken on added value in the eyes of Illinois farmers in recent weeks. A short crop in Manchuria, native production area for the world's soy beans, plus favorable marketing conditions for the American crop, have made the beans nearly twice as valuable as wheat to the growers this season.

Country elevators downstate yesterday were bidding 43 and 44 cents per bushel for the beans. They were bidding 38 to 41 cents for a bushel of wheat. Both products measure 60 pounds per bushel. But unofficial estimates of crop yields in Illinois show that farmers are getting 20 to 24 bushels of beans per acre, compared to about 18 of wheat.

In addition to the difference in yield and price in favor of beans over wheat, the former crop being a legume makes a valuable soil fertility builder whereas wheat draws fertility from the soil. Of the acreage in soy beans in central Illinois, Iowa and Indiana this season, a large portion has been turned into soy bean hay, valuable livestock feed. There are about 2,807,000 acres in the national crop this year.

Now on Export Basis.

"For the first time in history, soy beans have been on an export basis this year," stated Kenneth Coultas, secretary of the National Soy Bean Marketing association, with headquarters in Chicago. Shiploads of the beans have been going all summer to Liverpool, Rotterdam and Hamburg, the first boatload going direct from Chicago to Germany.

While the Europeans have depended in large part on Manchurian beans in past years, they now look to the Mississippi valley, and have been bidding against domestic millers all season for local production. American beans are higher in oil content but lower in protein.

In Germany and the Scandinavian countries soy bean oil is widely used because of its proteins and high yellow color for edible foods. Both in Europe and in the United States soy bean oil is credited with more diversified use than any other vegetable oil, except possibly linseed oil. When the oil has been removed from the cracked beans, the remaining meal is in great demand as a live stock feed on both continents.

Used for Food.

"The largest potential field for soy bean oil in this country, as in Europe and in other foreign places," declares Whitney H. Eastman, president of the National Soy Bean Oil Manufacturers' association, "is in the edible industry. There seems to be no doubt that the trend is very definitely in this direction.

"With a short crop in Manchuria, original home of the bean, European mills are likely to outbid domestic mills for soy beans. We need a substantially higher price for soy bean products in this country to protect our own manufacturers.

The beans were first introduced to this country in 1804, but the crop attained commercial importance during the world war. There are now mills in ten states. Those bidding for Illinois beans include mills at Decatur, Taylorville, Peoria, Chicago and St. Louis.

With corn at 18 to 20 cents per bushel, farmers with beans this season regard the crop with increased interest. The crop in central Illinois alone is said to be returning a million and a half dollars to growers.

New York, Sept. 23.—Higher levels were gained by leading stocks in a sluggish and generally uninteresting market today. Advances were limited in the main to a point or less. Trading volume was only a little in excess of 2,000,000 shares.

Brokers diagnosed the letup in activity as a "waiting attitude" brought about by the absence of any fresh speculative incentive in the form of news developments. Trade summaries were generally optimistic, although agreeing that the business improvement thus far had been reflected almost wholly in so-called trade lines with the heavy industries yet to turn the corner.

Rails Take Heart.

Railroad shares tried to take heart from a meeting of the eastern executives here to iron out further wrinkles in the merger project and from anticipations of another good showing in carloadings figures when the weekly report is made public tomorrow, but final gains in the group were no more pronounced than those in other directions. Many traders seemed to think that the carriers by their recent runup had discounted not only any announcement that might come out of the merger conference, but any improvement in freight revenue that might be announced in the next few weeks. At any rate activity in this quarter of the market subsided after an early flurry and a part of the forenoon gains dwindled away in dribbling liquidation.

Specialties attracted the most profitable attention. United Aircraft, Johns Manville, Allied Chemical, Auburn, and Gulf States Steel were the features of that group. The turnover in United Aircraft was extremely heavy and the sharp upturn of price gave evidence that cornered shorts were being made to pay through the nose. The issue closed at 33, up nearly 3 points on the day after being higher. United Aircraft has been an active feature of the list for several days and considerable speculation has been indulged in around the boardrooms as to the cause of its sudden prominence.

Oil Shares Heavy.

Oil shares had the burden of gasoline price cuts in the east to worry over and the tendency was toward lower levels. Standard of New Jersey, which slashed its rates sharply yesterday, was pressed for sale and finished nearly a point below its previous close. Standard of California, Texas corporation, Atlantic Refining, and other issues of the group also found the sledding difficult.

Motor shares came to the front in the last hour and General Motors and Chrysler were turned over rather briskly. Chrysler finished the day showing a net gain of 1⅝ points, while General Motors was up almost as much.

New York, Sept. 23.—The bond market was firmer throughout today. Trading on the rise, however, kept to a small volume except in a few issues favorably influenced by news developments. Speculative issues again assumed leadership after yesterday's recessions, gains in this section ranging from 1 to more than 3 points.

Nervousness in trading circles yesterday over the success of the Nickel Plate refunding plan and the postponement of action on the Baltimore and Ohio loan from the Reconstruction Finance corporation was largely dissipated.

Join General Advance.

Nickel Plate and Baltimore and Ohio issues joined the general advance, with such other carrier liens as Chicago and Northwestern, Rock Island, Missouri Pacific, New York Central, Erie, Pennsylvania, and Southern Pacific.

Treasury bonds were quietly traded in around yesterday's closings, which, except in the case of the 3s and 3¼'s, were around the best prices of the year.

International Telephone and Postal Telegraph obligations were substantially higher on a fair amount of trading.

Danish Issues in Demand.

A goodly share of the demand for foreign bonds was concentrated on Danish issues, sending two government and two Copenhagen bonds to new highs for the year. German 5½'s were moderately higher. On an average foreign bond prices were higher.

Buying of German bonds was stimulated by reports early today that orders from London had been placed here at prices just beneath the market.

NEW ISSUE.

The Harris Trust and Savings bank and Breed & Harrison are offering $523,730 Hamilton county, O., 4¼ per cent sewer bonds. These bonds are due serially Sept. 1, 1934 to 1954 and are being offered at prices to yield from 3.50 to 4.10 per cent.

MORROWS QUIT WARD BAKING; EXPLAIN STEP

New York, Sept. 23.—(AP)—George K. Morrow today resigned as chairman of the board of the Ward Baking company and Frederick K. Morrow, his brother, resigned as president.

In his letter of resignation, George K. said the two would be glad to continue on the executive committee of the company, but added that "we wish, however, to be relieved of the responsibility of our present executive offices, inasmuch as we do not believe it is necessary that we continue in them, inasmuch as we will be required for some time to come to give a great deal of our attention to other interests."

While Morrow did not specify the nature of the "other interests," it was taken to mean the United Cigar Stores company. The Morrows are busily engaged in an effort to reorganize that company.

George K. Morrow and associates acquired a controlling interest in the Ward Baking company in 1930. Previously he had won favor with the late George F. Baker because of his management of the Gold Dust company. The Morrows succeeded W. C. Evans, chairman, and Ralph S. Kent, president, who managed the company when it was controlled by Ward.

CHICAGO STOCK PRICES STEADY ON QUIET TRADE

Stock prices ruled firm yesterday in the quiet trading on the Chicago exchange. Featured by the trading were motor accessory shares which were buoyant on fairly active trading.

Walgreen was active and slightly higher as La Salle street heard vague reports of an early development of a bullish nature. Rumor had it that the company may initiate dividends on the common stock this year.

Generally the net changes for the day were small and in most cases favored the credit side of the ledger. U. S. Gypsum and Continental Chicago were among the shares which registered slight gains.

CHRYSLER PROPOSES STOCK VALUE CHANGE TO SIDESTEP TAXES

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Sept. 23.—The board of directors of the Chrysler corporation have recommended to stockholders that the capital stock of the company be changed from no par value, as at present, to a par value of $5 a share, it was announced today.

The corporation's proposed action follows that of many other companies which have sought to reduce transfer taxes for their stockholders. On no par value stock the federal transfer tax on sales is 5 cents a share if the stock sells at 25 or more.

CANADIAN WHEAT HEDGING DRIVES PRICES LOWER

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

Hedging pressure against Canadian wheat in the form of selling in the local market against purchases at Winnipeg checked what promised to be a good advance in the early trading. Prices at the extreme top showed ¾c above Thursday's finish, but the local market got somewhat out of line with Winnipeg and a resumption of the spreading operations which have been under way for some time disclosed a lack of aggressive buying. A reaction of ⅞@1¼c followed, and the finish was well toward the inside figures with net losses of ¾c. September closed at 51c, with December 53¾c and May 59¼c.

Wheat traders were more or less influenced in their operations by the action of stocks, but the firmness in the latter was largely ignored toward the last. Commission houses were on both sides of the market at times, with the east selling toward the last.

Watch Winnipeg Wheat.

The trade is keeping close watch of the Winnipeg wheat market where the October delivery sold within a fraction of the 50c level, and that figure is expected to demonstrate whether or not there will be unusually strong support.

Since Aug. 1 Canadian farmers have delivered 116,000,000 bu cash wheat at interior points in the prairie provinces, and the hedging sales against this grain has been a factor in causing a lower range of prices. However, trade leaders believe that the net decline of around 4c per bu which has been sustained in Winnipeg prices since Sept. 1 has been a relatively small loss, and there wonder was expressed yesterday over the manner in which the hedging had been absorbed. Chicago December is off around 2½c per bu as compared with Sept. 1.

Export Demand Light.

General run of news yesterday was rather favorable for a lower level of wheat prices. Winnipeg closed ⅝c lower, with December at 52⅝c in Canadian funds. Liverpool developed independent weakness due to scattered liquidation and closed 1¼@1⅝c per bu lower, with December at 57½c, the latter being 3¼c over Chicago at the time against 3½c on Thursday.

Country Sells Cash Corn.

There was no apparent letup in the desire of the country to sell cash corn yesterday and local handlers booked 280,000 bu to arrive. Hedging sales and scattered local pressure carried futures off around ½c from Thursday's finish, with the break checked by buying against bids. Closing trades were at net losses of ⅛@⅜c with September 27¾c, December 28⅞@29c and May 34⅛@34⅝c at the last.

Considerable improvement was shown in the shipping demand for cash corn with sales of 252,000 bu reported, and charters were made for 450,000 bu to Buffalo.

COTTON CLOSES LOWER

Cotton fluctuated erratically within a range of around 20 points on the nearby futures, but was unable to hold advances. The latter brought in increased hedging and southern selling and the forecast for dry weather over the greater part of the belt led to a belief that ginnings would be heavier within a few days. Chicago was off 10 to 16 points at the last, while other markets finished at losses of 15 to 25c points with the distant deliveries leading the decline. Based on the action of the Chicago market Liverpool was due to come around 8 points lower today.

Little attention was paid to the ginning report which showed a total of 2,637,000 bales ginned to Sept. 16, compared with 2,093,000 bales last year and 3,736,000 bales in 1930. Spinners takings for the week were estimated at 240,000 to 250,000 bales, against 193,000 bales last year. Spots were 10 to 20 points lower with New York, 7.35c and New Orleans, Houston, and Galveston 7.15c. Prices follow:

ARGENTINE CROP CONDITIONS

"Recent rains benefitted crops in northern Argentine districts, and though they did not touch eastern Buenos Aires province crops there are reported still favorable," says a cable to Broomhall. "Reports from north of Argentine are to the effect that the condition of growing wheat is generally good and of thick growth but it will be impossible to save many fields on account of locust devastation. West Bahia Blanca zone and the Pampa report favorable new crop conditions with oats, rye, and barley all being above average.

WORLD'S WHEAT STOCKS

World's available supply of wheat, as compiled by the Daily Trade Bulletin, increased 12,139,000 bu in August, compared with a decrease of 37,055,000 bu in July and with an increase of 46,806,000 bu in August last year. Details follow, the last three ciphers omitted:

The hog market turned reactionary after getting away to a good steady start yesterday. Pressure was brought in by local houses after eastern orders had been filled, and savings of as much as 10@15c were made on droves in mid-session and later. Sellers had anticipated a better market in view of the exceptionally light supplies of spring pigs coming on the market, and many turned down steady bids at the start, only to sell later in the day at the reduction.

The clearance at the decline was good and only pen holders and inferior grades of hogs were left. The fresh receipts at 14,000 equaled the smallest Friday run since July 1. Outsiders carried orders for about 20 per cent of the fresh supply. Fancy 8½ months old spring pigs topped the market on eastern account at $4.60, while the general average of all hogs showed 5c loss at $4.05. Extremely heavy "packers" ranged down to $3.00. The general hog market is in line with a week ago.

Cattle Continue Heavy.

Cattle continued their heavy footed pace through yesterday's session, but managed to keep away from the incline and finished the day about in line with Thursday's close. Only a meager run of 1,000 head showed up for sale, this being hardly enough to establish a fair list of quotations in all branches of the trade. Nothing was good enough to put the top price to a test. The best load lot of steers averaged 1,187 lbs, and sold at $7.50, with three steers at $7.75.

Several loads of 982@1,172 lb averages from Kansas went to country buyers for feeding at $6.00@6.50. Few others sold above $6.00 because of the poor quality of the week-end supply. Choice grades of cattle are closing steady this week, but all others show losses of 25@50c and in spots 75c. Butcher stock also are down 25@40c and in places more. Calves showed a $2.00 break for the five days.

Lambs Stage Recovery.

The lamb market managed to recover some of the recent loss after a steady to strong opening yesterday. Natives sold slowly at mostly steady rates during the forenoon, but range stock was carried into the later afternoon, 36 carloads of them, and worked into 15@25c higher price levels before the session ended. Tops from the supply of westerns sold at $5.75 and below. A handful of selected natives sold to city butchers at $6.00, while the majority of this class brought $5.25@5.35. Lambs are still sharply lower than a week ago. Natives show 25@50c loss for the week, while range lambs are down mostly 50c. Aged sheep closed 25@50c under last week.

Receipts at Chicago for today are estimated at 400 cattle, 6,000 hogs and 1,000 sheep, against 832 cattle, 5,739 hogs and 3,130 sheep the previous Saturday and 332 cattle, 4,868 hogs and 2,582 sheep a year ago.

Probable receipts of hogs at Chicago for next Monday are estimated from 24,000 to 40,000. W. M. Burrows marked 24,000, O. Dwight and M. S. Castle, 28,000; S. Lund, R. B. Ellis and C. Daley and M. J. Berkery, 30,000; F. Knutzen, P. Allen, A. G. Welhener and W. Haskins, 32,000; H. Wolfe, 34,000; H. L. Johannsen, 35,000 and P. Shalk, 40,000.
